ROJESTVENSKY REPORTED HEADING STRAIGHT TO ATTACK JAPS

RUSSIAN SHIPS IN FULL BATTLE ARRAY

BATTLESHIP OF ROJESTVENSKY'S FLEET "CLEARED FOR ACTION"

Russian Admiral, According to Reports From Many Sources, Will Try Gage of Battle in Straits of Formosa, Where Japanese Fleet Is Believed to be Awaiting Him.

LONDON, April 15.--Cleared for action and lined up in fighting array, the Russian fleet, according to the most authentic reports obtainable, is moving north in the China Sea toward Formosa, where the Japanese fleet is believed to be waiting. There, in the Straits of Formosa, or possibly just south, naval experts are hourly expecting the great sea battle, one which may end the war.

Admiral Rojestvensky is reported to have paused off the Philippines to coal his vessels and make final preparations for the battle. Now he is apparently making directly for the scene of the forthcoming fight. Dispatches received here from half a dozen points on the China Sea all point toward a battle within a few hours.

DECKS CLEARED FOR ACTION.

Dispatches from Hong Kong today say that the steamer Poona reports that she passed the Russian fleet at sea last Tuesday. One of the vessels of the fleet intercepted her and ascertained her name, the nature of her cargo and the names of its consignees, and then wished her a pleasant voyage.

The Poona's captain says that the decks of the Russian warships were cleared for action and that the ships had a business-like appearance. They seemed to be well manned, for their decks were crowded. He thought the fleet was in serviceable condition and would be formidable if well handled.

Three scouting ships brought up the rear of the Russian column. There were only eight torpedo craft with the fleet.

London has also many rumors of the movements of these Russian and Japanese fleets in the China Seas. The latest of these is that Admiral Rojestvensky has detached three of his fastest cruisers, ordering them northward to run endeavor to draw Admiral Togo in pursuit.

The British Admiralty has received certain information indicating this, although none of this will be made public at present. Berlin's Navy Department, too, has received information to this effect. Berlin also has a rumor that the Russian fleet is now lying off the Cuyos Islands, eighty miles south of Mindoro, Philippine Islands, coaling for the fight which will precipitate the battle, but there is a belief that the fleet has already sailed.

TO JOIN RUSSIAN FLEET.

Another dispatch from Hong Kong says that several colliers from Cardiff and Durban have arrived there and are awaiting orders. The cargoes of the ships, it is believed, are intended for Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet.

The Russian hospital ship, the Orel, which put into Saigon, French Cochin China, for supplies, has sailed from that port after taking on stores and 900 tons of coal to join the Russian fleet. It was reported that the ship had many wounded men aboard, indicating that a fight had been in progress between the Russian and Japanese fleets on the 13th inst. Saigon dispatches say the men were only ill, not wounded.

A Berlin dispatch, concerning the report that the Russian fleet had been reported at the Cuyos Islands, says:

"The German Navy Department received in a telegram to-day from one of the East Indian ports an indication that the Russians, when off the southern end of Cochin China, April 11, changed their course and headed on a course which would bring them to the Cuyos Islands, in the northern part of the Sulu Sea, eight hundred miles distant, in four days at the rate of eight knots an hour. The Cuyos Islands are tactically in such a position that the approaches can easily be watched by the Russian scouts."

NEAR FORMOSA STRAITS.

In London this report is discredited. It is known that Rojestvensky has received orders to go straight ahead, and his fleet has just finished coaling north of the Anambas Islands. It is believed here, therefore, that the fleet is now nearing the Straits of Formosa and that the fight is only a question of a few hours.

Saigon dispatches by way of Hong Kong suggest that the Russian squadron may lay up somewhere in the Cuyos Sea until the end of April before seeking an engagement with the Japanese. This is not possible, naval experts say, because the fleet would not be permitted to remain in any port for any great length of time, and on the sea would be constantly exposed to an attack from Admiral Togo.

MANY QUIT WARSAW FEARING TROUBLE IN EASTER HOLIDAYS

WARSAW, Russian Poland, April 15.--Disturbances here are feared during the Easter holidays.

Many people are leaving Warsaw and accommodations in the sleeping cars to Berlin and Vienna have been engaged several days ahead.

Fresh strikes are reported at Lods, Russian Poland, where the situation is causing much uneasiness.

The trials of the persons arrested in connection with the January disturbances are now proceeding in the citadel behind closed doors and under martial law. It is understood that several of the prisoners have already received the most severe servitude sentences.

FLAHERTY TO RETAIN POWER IN COMMITTEE

Names Seven Executive Members Today, Schaeffer Probably at Head.

The subcommittee of the Democratic State Committe meets at 11 o'clock to-day at State Headquarters, Liberty Square, to complete a new draft of the rules that are to govern the actions of the State Committee for the coming year. Josiah Quincy is the chairman of this committee.

The amended rules will be presented to the meeting of the State Committee at Tremont Temple this afternoon. There will be several changes reported by the sub-committee, but none that will interfere with the appointive power of the chairman of the State Committee as it exists at present. Captain John J. Flaherty, chairman of the State Committee, and Colonel William A. Gaston have agreed upon this point.

As was told in yesterday's BOSTON AMERICAN, Major Robert J. Crowley voluntarily released Captain Flaherty from his promise to place him upon the executive committee and thus relieved the somewhat strained situation that has existed for some time. Major Crowley did this because of his warm personal friendship for Captain Flaherty and in the interest of harmony.

At the meeting of the committee this afternoon Captain Flaherty will name seven members of the executive committee of which he and the chairman of the finance committee are ex-officio members. It is said that the members to go on the committee will be perfectly satisfactory to Colonel Gaston.

Henry T. Schaeffer, it is said, will be selected as chairman of the executive committee. He is regarded as a very good man for the place and is friendly to all interests of the party. He is a hustling campaigner.

TEN TO ONE.

As It Appears to the New York Fans.

By James Montague.

They're wearing crepe on Beacon street; the Back Bay folk are glum;
All Boston town will eat black beans for many days to come;
The sacred codfish bows his head and sighs in sheer despair.
And beats convulsively his tail upon the empty air.
For, though the Boston baseball team can quote from Emerson,
The Giants merely quote the score—"we beat 'em ten to one."

McGraw perhaps could hardly write their epitaph in Greek,
And Boston would not understand the language he can speak;
He may not know that Paul Revere stirred up the countryside
By shouting, "Git your muskets," on his justly famous ride.
But better far than knowledge of the Greek or Paul's home run,
Is knowing how to play good ball—the score was ten to one.

Clear down from Bunker Hill they came, with cultured verve and zest,
They came and quoted Emerson—the Giants did the rest.
And now they wonder why it was they came so far away
To find a frost, when Boston town is always quite frappe.
When they return their friends may say in sympathy, "Well done."
Which is no joke, well done they were—the score was ten to one!

VINTON NOW BELIEVED TO BE A SUICIDE

Body of Missing Cashier of Oxford Bank Thought to Be in Some Pond.

Special to the Boston American.

OXFORD, April 15.—It is now generally believed that Frank E. Vinton, the missing cashier of the Oxford National Bank, has committed suicide. Search has been made for him in every possible place where it was thought that trace of him would be found, but not the slightest clew has been obtained.

Investigations conducted by Joseph A. Dodge, cashier of the Grafton Savings Bank, in which town Vinton lived, have proven that Vinton was in Grafton on the night of March 27. He found that Willard H. Brown rode from Boston to Grafton with Vinton on that night.

It has been found that Vinton left the train at Grafton Centre and that he must have remained somewhere in that vicinity for the rest of the night. He did not go to his home and he was not a passenger on the last car to leave Grafton. Neither did he hire a rig at the only livery stable in the town.

Vinton was not seen again alive as far as known. The supposition is that his body is lying in some one of the surrounding ponds.

JEFFERSON, NOT SERIOUSLY ILL, SAYS SON

Florida Dispatches Declare Veteran Actor Near Death, but Children Deny It.

Dispatches received in Boston to-day from West Palm Beach, Fla., declare that the family of Joseph Jefferson, the veteran actor, fearing the worst, is assembled at his bedside, awaiting the end, which is now expected momentarily.

Three weeks ago Mr. Jefferson visited ex-President Cleveland at Hobe Sound, where he caught cold, and upon his return to Palm Beach he was forced to take to his bed.

He convalesced and was up after a few days' confinement, when, on Monday, he was seized with a relapse, according to the Florida dispatch.

A dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN from New York says that Thomas Jefferson, Jr., son of the aged actor, who is in New York, declares that he has received a message from his brother, Charles B. Jefferson, stating that there was no truth in the reports of Mr. Jefferson's serious illness. Mr. Jefferson has been slightly indisposed, but is rapidly recovering, his son declares.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK TRAIN

Iron Bar Placed Across Rails at Goff's Falls Shakes Up Boston Express.

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 15.—The police of this and neighboring cities are searching for a tramp who is supposed to be responsible for an attempt to wreck the fast Boston express on the Boston & Maine railroad. A huge iron draw bar was fastened across the rail at Goff's Falls, about three miles south of here, and was struck with great force by the heavily loaded train.

The passengers were thrown into confusion by the shock, and the pilot of the engine smashed, but the train held the rails. Just as the train was rounding a curve the engineer caught sight of the obstruction, but could not bring his engine to a standstill till after the crash. A man appearing like a tramp was seen running away toward the woods.

The railroad authorities have placed men on guard along the tracks. Several fires were discovered by section men along the line of road, and a brick was hurled through the window of the Portsmouth train. Every effort is being made to apprehend those perpetrating the outrages.

The girl will buy no hats when she opens the millinery shop.

GIRLS PLAY BASKETBALL FOR NEW ENGLAND CHAMPIONSHIP

Undefeated Lowell and Portland High School Teams Measure Strength and Prowess To-day.

MISS ANNA BROWN

MISS RUTH BAILEY, CAPTAIN

MISS ETHEL RIVET

MISS CAROLINE SPALDING

MISS FANNIE HOBBS

MISS FLORENCE FARR

MISS BESSIE WALSH. MISS ELIZABETH SPALDING.

SOME BASKET BALL GIRLS.

Miss Ruth Bailey, of Mill City Team, Is Undisputed Best Girl Player of World.

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, April 15. If Lowell wins in the girls' basketball game with Portland this afternoon in this city and thus secures the championship of New England, it will be a fact of interest not only to all people interested in the athletic development of young women, but every citizen of Lowell will feel a personal satisfaction, for Lowell is proud of her basketball team.

Lowell High has played forty-two games with strong Massachusetts High school teams during the past three seasons and has not been defeated once. The team has scored 1,362 points to its opponents' 241. During this season 15 games, with 15 baskets, while its opponents have made ten baskets.

During one of these games the world's record was broken, when Miss Ruth Bailey, firmly believed to Lowellites to be the best feminine basketball player in the world, made forty baskets and the Redpoint High School team was defeated 90 to 0.

Made Half Total Points.

Miss Bailey, who is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. S. G. Bailey, has made 722, or more than half, of the 1,362 points scored by Lowell in the three years she has played. She is the mainstay of the team, and while the general work of the team is up-to-date for the wonderful victories it is largely from her fighting that the ball pegs to the goal. In one game she made thirty-two baskets, scoring two different quarter periods. Miss Bailey is going to graduate this year and will go to Mt. Holyoke in the fall.

The passing of the Lowell girls is something phenomenal. Followers of the game believe their science has never been equalled by any team of girls or men. In many games their opponents have hardly received the ball during the entire game. Yet the Lowell girls are not rough. During the present season not a single foul for roughness has been called on the team.

Miss Anna Brown, the captain, is one of the younger social set, and is very popular. She plays gracefully and has been Lowell's mainstay in center territory, the ball usually coming to her during the ball is passed to the goal. In one game she made thirty-two baskets, scoring two different quarter periods. Miss Bailey is going to graduate this year and will go to Mt. Holyoke in the fall.

Several Teams Shut Out.

Miss Bessie Walsh and Miss Caroline Spalding, right and left centers, are two fine girls. Fearless and powerful on the court, it has been their duty to feed Lowell's alert forwards, and they have done the work assigned them with clever ness. Both being women have the secret of passing the ball and fool the opponent, the defensive.

Miss Elizabeth Spalding, Miss Ruth Carter and Miss Mary Sawyer have alternated forwards. All are young women well known in social circles. The first two are very young, Carter and Miss Sawyer has made a specialty of basket throwing. She has thrown goals according to figure as small in stature but full of speed and determination. She can throw the ball in opponent's territory the length of time and is very valuable to the team. Miss Ethel Bailey.

The Lowell guards who have played this year are Miss Ethel Rivet, Miss Fannie Hobbs and Miss Florence Farr. These three girls have weight and speed, a combination that has served to beat many teams and has made the most important consideration of all.

Very few baskets have been scored on Lowell this year, most of the points by opponents having been made on free trips. Lowell has shut out several teams, the highest score being 90 to 0, and the lowest 5 to 0.

CHARGED WITH GROSS CRUELTY TO HIS PUPILS

Principal House, of Manchester, N. H., Faces Serious Accusation of Boy's Father.

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 15. Philip Riley, of East Manchester, has preferred charges against Principal William H. House of brutal and inhuman treatment of pupils of the Hallsville School.

Riley told the School Committee that House brutally kicked a boy by the name of Hoggard girls unmercifully, sent many of the children home with their bodies black and blue and swollen from bruisings, and charged House with so injuring his own son that the child is now deaf.

Parents Are Angry.

Pupils in the school corroborate his statements and parents say House is unfit for duty as a schoolmaster, charging him with being of a brutal temperament, altogether unfitted for sex or age.

In his testimony before the School Board Mr. Riley said Frank Blake's son was so unmercifully beaten for a childish prank that the boy was compelled to remain indoors for several days.

Another instance of House's alleged brutality was cited when Mr. Riley read a letter received from John Barry, in which Mr. Barry said he had seen House kick a child in the stomach while standing in front of the schoolhouse. There was apparently no provocation according to Barry's deposition.

Mr. Riley charged that House injured one William St. Clair that the lad suffered from pain trouble, and while suffering from an attack of that trouble fell from a freight car and was killed.

Admits Punishment.

House replied to all the charges. He said he might have punished some of the children severely, but it was always "in the interests of the school and the pupils."

House has been principal of the Hallsville School for fifteen years. Riley is a veteran of the Civil War and is a respected citizen of the city.

The other victim is Joaquin Garcia, a nine-year-old girl. She lives on Woods court and is a pupil at the Prescott School. An operation has been performed on her, and it is hoped to save her life.

Information Asked of S. G. Gibson of Ohio Regarding Threats of Combine.

HE IS BEATING MONOPOLY

OBERLIN, Ohio, April 15. The fight that S. G. Gibson of this place is putting up against the Standard Oil Company has been renewed. This time the government has taken a hand. The following letter from the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington, was received by Mr. Gibson to-day:

"In a clipping from the Press of Cleveland, Ohio, dated recently, it is stated that during December on account of your getting out oil from an independent manufacturer, a representative of the Standard Oil Company warned you not to buy more oil from that manufacturer, and finally declared war against you by cutting prices and establishing competing delivery wagons.

Asks for Information.

Will you kindly give me full information with regard to this transaction, stating the name of the agent of the Standard Oil Company, the substance of his statement to you, the prices charged by the company to retail dealers in Oberlin before and since, and the result of the reported competition.

"It is important that the information for which should be full and complete.

(Signed) "HERBERT KNOX SMITH,
Acting Commissioner."

Gibson will furnish the information and will do it fully. The Standard wagon run by A. Wilcox, his opponent, has discontinued from lack of trade, and Gibson says his sales have tripled in the last month. The Standard has given notice that it will put on a new wagon the first of next month, and it is expected that the fur will be waged in earnest.

Gibson says he will fight them to the bitter end, if the people will stand back of him.

Public Supported Him.

He has steadily refused to buy Standard oil, using the independent product. He has been stubbornly opposed by men placed on the Republican ticket. The public stands with him and boys of him, paying a fair price, higher than that asked by the Standard.

He is followed by the combine's agent in all his efforts to drive him out of business. A similar case is that of Meloy Brooks, a Chardon, Ohio, oil dealer, who won in a two-year battle all the points against the Standard.

CHADWICK BAIL NOW $52,000

CINCINNATI, April 15. The court of appeals from four minutes' deliberation this morning decided that Mrs. Chadwick is released from jail under her ten year sentence, pending a new trial in the court of appeals. If she can give $52,000 bail.

This bail has reference only to the case in which she was convicted. The total amount of bail she must give to secure her freedom is now $52,000.

MAY CHANGE CHARGE TO MANSLAUGHTER

LYNN, April 15. The case of Seth K. Whittier, charged with the murder of Mrs. Susie A. Fuller, his divorced wife, on March 16, was again continued for one week in the Lynn Police Court to-day. The findings of the inquest are now in the hands of District Attorney Peters. In all probability the District Attorney will agree to the charge of murder being changed to manslaughter.

"NEW THOUGHT" TEACHER REWEDS MAN SHE ONCE GAVE UP TO RIVA

MRS. DRAKE PUTS THEORY INTO PRACTICE

Divorced Her Husband a Year Ago When He Confessed He Loved Another.

CHILD FACTOR IN REUNION

Practicing that philosophy which she teaches, a beautiful Brookline wife gave up her husband to another; then, when he realized that his regard for the other woman had been an infatuation and his love for the sweetheart of his youth and mother of his boy, real and vital, the wife, who had secured a divorce, remarried him. In all the time of the separation the former husband and wife remained the best of friends, and a friend of each of them now is the woman who had disrupted the home.

This, in brief, is the romance and tragedy of the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton E. Drake. She has lived for a long time past at No. 22 Linden street; the husband has an office at No. 141 Milk street. The newly claimed bride-wife is a teacher of the New Thought, a litterateur, scholar and dramatic reader. During the year since she secured a divorce, the former husband has been a frequent caller and the love for the boy has been followed by a renewed love for the wife, who, despite her unselfishness, has kept her love for her husband alive during all the marital unhappiness.

Wrong to Continue.

Mrs. Drake was formerly Harriett M. Larocque of Bakersfield, Vt. She is a woman of a striking type and has achieved considerable success in her literary and dramatic work. The son is a beautiful child. Mrs. Drake's own story of the little heart tragedy is interesting:

"When my husband came to me and told me that he was infatuated with another woman, that he had struggled in vain against the feeling, of course," she said "I felt it to be a great blow, but realizing that it is impossible and wrong for two people to live together when love had ceased on the part of one of both, I applied for a divorce, more for his sake than for my own, in order that I might permit him to live honorably.

"As for myself, I never would have married again.

"But, strange to say, when my husband, for whom I have never ceased to have the deepest regard, was once freed from the bonds of matrimony, his infatuation for this woman rapidly waned and he recovered his poise, realizing that his affection for me had never been eradicated, and now, after a year has passed, we are happily reunited without the necessity of saying one word to each other on the subject.

No Need of Words.

"We met on friendly terms many times through the past year, and he visited my house and took supper with me and our little son.

"I never forget that, although he was my husband up more in theory of the law, he was still the father of my child.

"Consequently, when, at his earliest express it, he seemed to awaken from the dream in which he had been walking, there was no need of words between us to put things right.

"So quiet has everything been kept that few of my friends have known of the trouble at all. Now we are happily remarried.

"I have constantly corresponded with the

MRS. W. E. DRAKE AND SON

WILTON E. DRAKE

woman who attempted and eventually failed to win my husband away from me since the divorce, and although I have never seen her my teachings have wrought a remarkable change in her life.

"I did not feel like tearing her eyes out or scratching her. What would be the use of that?

"I feel sorry for her, for when two people are in love they are not altogether the masters of their own impulse.

"At last she has regained to some extent that poise of mind which has enabled her to see things in their true light and is living quietly in Boston.

Never Doubted Return.

"I never had any doubt but that Mr. Drake would eventually realize that his affection had never ceased for me and that when that time came we should at once become reunited."

The philosophical spirit which Mrs. Drake exhibited during the estrangement from her husband is due to the fact that she has endeavored to carry into practice the theory of the science which she has taught, namely that with the correct mental and physical poise the most poignant part of the ills of life can be robbed of their sting.

"We are very happy to be married again," says Mr. Drake. "With our little boy we shall move soon into a home I have purchased in East Weymouth."

NO JUROR OVER 40 YEARS FOR NAN PATTERSON

She Will Insist on a Trial by Young Men, Her Counsel Announces.

CONFIDENT OF ACQUITTAL

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 15.—When Nan Patterson goes to trial for the third time for the death of "Caesar" Young, she will insist upon a jury composed of young men.

Daniel O'Reilly, her counsel, stated today that Nan would object to jurymen over forty years old. She believes that a jury of younger men than she had last time would never convict her on the evidence presented by the prosecution.

They were mostly old men on the jury at her last trial," said O'Reilly, "and Nan feels sure that if they had been younger she would have been acquitted. She is not counting on the susceptibilities of the younger men, but she says that they can see things better than older men, who merely figure on the law of the main points and pay no attention to the little bits that count so much.

Nan More Confident.

"As to the dismissing of the indictment for conspiracy against Nan," she said she never could see how the court could do anything else, and she fully believes the indictment against Morgan Smith and his wife will be dismissed also."

The third trial is scheduled to begin Monday. It is believed at least three days will be spent in securing the jury.

Nan feels even more content in facing this trial than she did before. There are no missing links this time. The Smiths are on the ground and Nan feels sure that they will help her.

The conspiracy indictment was dismissed by Judge Foster after a conference between Mr. Jerome and Assistant District Attorney Rand and on motion of Mr. Rand in open court.

The application of Mr. Rand came as a great surprise to Lawyer Abe Levy. He felt certain of obtaining permission to inspect the Grand Jury minutes and from all the evidence given in secret, by which Mr. Rand hopes to be able to show that the death of "Caesar" Young was the outcome of alleged conspiracy. Having the indictment against Nan Patterson dismissed forestalled this plan of the defense.

Confession of Subterfuge.

Levy and Unger allege that the course of the District Attorney is a confession that the indictment of the Smiths and Nan Patterson for conspiracy was merely a subterfuge to get the Smiths into New York county so that they may be used either as witnesses or otherwise to further the ends of the prosecution.

Nan Patterson's cheerfulness when she was brought out in court was in striking contrast to the nervousness and despondency shown in every look and movement of her sister Julia, who walked at her side.

The charge against Mrs. Smith is only a misdemeanor at best, but since she has been in the Tombs she has been overpowered by the fear that she and her husband may be used in some way to injure her sister.

After Nan Patterson had been taken to the Tombs, the Smiths were arraigned to plead, but Lawyer Herbert R. Limburger induced them with a demurrer to the indictment, which will have to be decided before the Smiths make a plea.

Lawyer Limburger demanded the return of all the property seized by agents of Jerome in Cincinnati belonging to the Smiths, and asked Judge Foster to direct the Attorney to turn it over to them.

Wants Property Returned.

Mr. Limburger states if the property is returned to his client, any part of it will be at the disposal of the district attorney at any time he may be needed.

Judge Foster declined to take summary action, and said if a crime had been committed it would come under the jurisdiction of officials in Ohio.

Judge Foster reserved decision on both of the motions of Lawyer Limburger.

Later in the day all the clothing of the Smiths and other personal property, which cannot possibly have any bearing on the charge against Nan Patterson or the Smiths, was sent to the St. Paul's Hotel from the District Attorney's office.

It was received by J. Randolph Patterson, the aged father of Nan Patterson, and such articles as may be useful will be sent to the Smiths in the Tombs to-day.

MABEL WALKER WED TO A MELROSE BOY

MABEL WALKER, MYSTERIOUS TUCKER WITNESS.

From a hitherto unpublished photograph of her taken when a child.

Joseph E. Grundy United to Missing Tucker Witness at Damariscotta, Me.

Friends of Joseph E. Grundy, a popular young salesman in the employ of the millinery store of Clapp & Tilton on Summer street, this city, showered him with congratulations today when they learned for the first time that he had been quietly married to Miss Mabel Walker, of Damariscotta, Me.

Miss Walker is the charming young woman who figured so prominently in connection with the case against Charles Louis Tucker, who was convicted of the murder of Mabel Page. An attempt was made by the defence to have Miss Walker one of the jurors of Tucker, but efforts to get her were vain.

Tucker met Miss Walker on the afternoon of the murder, about two hours after it is believed the tragedy occurred. Miss Walker was wanted at the trial to establish that Tucker's conduct that afternoon was inconsistent with his having committed such a crime as the one with which he was charged.

Parents Corroborate.

The parents of Grundy, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Grundy, at their home, No. 18 Cottage street, Melrose, to-day corroborated the fact of the marriage of the young couple, and admitted that it was a surprise to them, although they said they had expected that the marriage would take place some time. The elder Mr. Grundy is a bookkeeper. He talked to a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN while Mrs. Grundy stood at his side.

"It is true that Joe has been married," said Mr. Grundy. "We have kept it as quiet as possible because we desired to avoid the notoriety that would ensue if it became public, as a result of the young woman's connection with the Tucker case.

"Joe and Miss Walker were married at Damariscotta on Monday. Joseph went up there Sunday. After they were married he wrote to us about it.

Have Parental Blessing.

"Our son's wife is a fine young woman, and we have not the least objection to her. All that we regretted was the notoriety that has clung to her. But that was not her fault, for our son was his own master, and he was entitled to marry the girl of his choice, and he did it. They have our parental blessing.

"We know the young woman, as she has visited at our house several times. She was here last Sunday. We all liked her very much. She and Joe have known each other for four years. He met her at her home in Maine, where he spent his vacation. They have corresponded since their first meeting.

May Come Here.

"Our new daughter-in-law is still at her old home in Maine. It has not been decided yet whether she will come here at present or just exactly what they will do. Joe has not made up his mind yet. Now that the fact of his marriage is out he will probably make some move soon toward going to housekeeping."

A BOSTON AMERICAN reporter called at the store where Mr. Grundy is employed and found him behind one of the counters waiting upon customers. He is a slender young man of twenty-three, with brown hair and a small mustache of the same color. He dresses neatly and has usually a suave manner, but this was when what ruffled because of the prominence that he had suddenly assumed in the news of the day.

"Is it true that you and Miss Walker are married?" asked the reporter.

Young Mr. Grundy's face flushed. He was plainly disconcerted.

"I have nothing to say—nothing to say," said the girlie in his eye may have been of anger.

82 HOURS FROM COAST TO COAST

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 15.—As the private car of Dr. W. Seward Webb, the millionaire railroad man of New York, rolled into the Grand Central station here, Dr. Webb looked at his watch and observed to a friend who was waiting on the platform:

"Ten minutes better than I expected—we have broken the transcontinental railroad record between New York and San Francisco by nearly two hours."

And so he had—with one exception that possibly escaped his memory.

His time between the coasts was eighty-one hours and fifty-five minutes, just about thirty years ago when under the "great eighty-hour run" of the Jarrett and Palmer theatrical special (which covered the distance in three days seven hours and thirty-nine minutes, or a little more than eighty hours). That was in June, 1876.

This record Mr. Webb re-engraved, and but for several delays would have established a new limit.

Dr. Webb is well known as a fast railroad traveller. He has broken railroad records all over the United States.

ALICE ROOSEVELT TO VISIT CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, April 15.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth to-day said that Miss Alice Roosevelt would visit his mother some time during the month of May. Mr. Longworth added: "Miss Roosevelt is a great friend of my sister, Mrs. Wadlington, and will accompany her on a visit to my mother at her home on Grandin Road. She will be here two days."

CAMBRIDGE MAN WANTED FOR THEFT

CLEVELAND, April 15.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Thomas Bradley, twenty-three years of age, who is charged with taking a package containing $1,000 from a Wells-Fargo Express Company wagon and disappearing. Bradley was employed as an assistant on the wagon. He recently came here from Cambridge, Mass. Bradley is said to have recently been in the United States Navy and to have been stationed at Pensacola, Fla.

RELEASED AS SOON AS SENTENCED

BURLINGTON, Vt., April 15.—In the County Court here, after Charles Murray had pleaded guilty of grand larceny and had been sentenced by Judge Watson to from three to four years in the State prison, the Judge allowed Murray his freedom under the care of the probation officers. The Judge said he did this because Murray's employers had expressed a willingness to take him back.

GARFIELD PROBES OIL.

LAWRENCE, Kan., April 15.—James R. Garfield, Commissioner of Corporations, left for Chanute, where he will begin actively his investigation of oil conditions.

HUSBAND IS HEAD OF HOUSE

—JUDGE BRUCE.

Judge Bruce of Malden District Court says that man is the head of the household. He gave that opinion in the case of Malcolm Cameron of Wakefield, who was charged by his wife with non-support. The burden of her complaint seemed to be that her husband would not let her spend his money.

"Highly many earn the money all right, but I propose to do the spending," said Mrs. Cameron.

Cameron stood up for his rights and said he would spend his own money, and thompson followed the little family jar which had landed them in court.

The Judge backed up Cameron and discharged him.

$125,000 FIRE IN WEST WARE MILL

WARE, April 15.—The West Ware paper mill, about six miles from Ware Centre, has been destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of $100,000 to $125,000, partly insured. The fire fighting apparatus of the mill being cut off by the fire, aid was summoned from Springfield, but before it arrived the mill was practically destroyed.

WOMAN AIDED IN OPERATION ON SELF

NEW YORK, April 15.—Dr. Stella Quinby Boet, one of the most prominent physicians of Stamford, Ct., and the daughter of L. C. Root of Stamford, is at the Bahnemann Hospital recovering from an operation for appendicitis. She is an expert in surgery and she helped to direct the operation on herself.

ARRESTED AT HIS INITIATION

Arrested while dressed as a woman, and making a speech from the top of an electric light pole to a crowd of 400 people, Frank W. Thompson, a Harvard student, was in the Somerville Court to-day, charged with "rude and disorderly conduct." He was arrested by Patrolman Charles E. Byrnes after Thompson, who was being initiated into a college secret society, had paraded through the streets of Somerville, followed by a number of members of the society and a rapidly increasing crowd.

At Union square Thompson was ordered to climb the pole and make a speech. His arrest followed. The court placed the case on file.

SNOW IN TWO OF STATE'S CITIES

FITCHBURG, April 15.—Snow fell here during the night, and Wachusett and the hills to the west of this city are solidly white to-day. The snow froze and it was icy in sheltered spots.

GLOUCESTER, April 15.—A snow squall travelled here for a short time this morning.

PENSION CLERK DIES OF GAS POISONING

Charles L. Hucked, chief clerk in the Boston pension office, was found dead in his room at No. 37 Bloomfield street, Dorchester, death being caused by accidental gas poisoning, according to the report of Medical Examiner Draper. Mr. Hucked was alone in the house, and it is supposed that a gust of wind blew out the flame after he had gone to bed.

"GENERAL" COXEY IN BANKRUPTCY

COLUMBUS, O., April 15.—"General" Jacob S. Coxey, of commonweal fame, has been declared a bankrupt by the United States Court. His liabilities are $283,000. Judge Thompson ordered Coxey's discharge. His assets are tied up in the Coxey Sand Company, at Massillon, O.

FLYNN AUTO YET UNTRACED

Secretary Austin B. Fletcher of the Massachusetts Highway Commission says that there is no way in which they can keep track of the large number of automobiles which are run under the same numbers by dealers.

"The dealers are given ten cards with the same registration number on them and as these are changeable from one machine to another, we cannot keep track of them," said Mr. Fletcher.

"The case of this man Bratley, who had the number 9313 loaned him and his lost one of his cards, which may have been used on the machine which killed James or Flynn, is an example."

As yet the police have been unable to trace the ownership of the machine which killed Flynn.

TRAINS WILL RUN WITH ONE BRAKEMAN

NEW HAVEN, April 15.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will remove one brakeman from each of its express freights from New York east, and these trains will be run hereafter with one conductor, a flagman and a brakeman.

This is made possible by the act of Congress requiring all freights to be equipped with air brakes, and by the recent action of the company in refusing to handle any cars not thus equipped.

BODY OF PAUL JONES IN PARIS GRAVE; WONDERFULLY PRESERVED

Great American Admiral's Remains Are to Be Brought Home for Burial.

The remains of John Paul Jones, founder of the American navy, have been recovered from an obscure grave in a Paris cemetery.

They will be brought back to this country in a warship. Over a suitable grave which will be selected Congress there will be erected a monument which after more than a century of neglect will do justice to the country's first naval hero.

The finding of the remains brings to an end a long search which has been carried on by the efforts of Ambassador Porter and Congressman H. T. Rainey, of Illinois.

Five years ago Ambassador Porter started the search. It was conducted at his own expense. Congressman Rainey introduced a bill that an appropriation of $35,000 should be made to continue the work. Paris, President Roosevelt favored the bill, but the session was allowed to close without it being passed.

It was an almost hopeless task, this endeavor to find the last resting place of a great hero. In 1792 John Paul Jones died in obscure lodgings in Paris, where he had gone to take service with the French navy.

His funeral cost $92. The expenses were paid by a commissary of police who had been his friend. M. Simoneau was the coroner's name.

The search was discovered when a letter was brought to light describing the funeral following closely the actual burial place. The archives which would have told were burned in the Commune of 1871.

The search was kept up, however, and at last a very plausible grave in the selection of an abandoned cemetery, the old St. Louis, which had been built over by houses and shops. Somewhere underneath these houses Ambassador Porter felt sure that the remains of the hero would be found.

There were several clues by which the right coffin would be known. It was a coffin of lead, and there was but one other casket of that description in the cemetery in Paris for several years. It was known that one of his wounds had left his nose out of shape. Then there was the size of the body, remarkably large for one of his short, spare stature.

Arrangements were made to have excavations started under the walls of the old cemetery. It cost money, but Congress appropriated the funds, inviting Ambassador Rainey's bill go through. It did not defer American patriotic sentiment from contributing to the search. Neither did Ambassador Porter give up.

Woman Gave a Clue.

At last there came forward a woman who lived in one of the houses, who said that she was quite young when she had heard from her parents and her grandparents that underneath the parlor floor would be found the coffin which contained the body sought remains.

Here the excavation was renewed. Tunnels had to be constructed and the leaden coffins which were unearthed carefully examined.

On February 24 a leaden coffin was discovered. It took three days of hard work to be cleaned so that it could be described. In the meantime the word was flashed across the world that the body of John Paul Jones had been discovered. Patriotic people felt a thrill of pride that they would at last have an opportunity of giving honor where honor was due.

In the end they were disappointed. The coffin plate showed that the body buried therein belonged to an Englishman who had died two years before John Paul had passed away.

The work did not stop. It was felt that the searchers were on the right track. Nothing more was heard until the authentic news came that the real coffin had been found and that it had been undoubtably proven to hold the remains of the man who never would give up.

Find Right Coffin.

Day after day the tunneling continued and hundreds of coffins were found. They were all wooden coffins, however, and the searchers paid no particular attention to them. Last Wednesday the workmen found four leaden coffins and Ambassador Porter felt sure that one of them contained the body of America's great Admiral.

Three of the leaden coffins bore plates telling the identity of the dead. The fourth, however, had no plate. It was of an unusual workmanship and solidity. It was shaped like a mummy coffin, so was out of fashion in those days. This coffin was opened in the presence of General Porter, Colonel Rodenbough, second ambassador of the American embassy and Engineer Welch, under whose directions the excavations have been conducted.

Body Well Preserved.

The three men were at once struck with the likeness of the head and face to pictures and statues of John Paul Jones. The body was wrapped in thick sheets of lead and was immersed in alcohol. It was remarkably well preserved. The three men were satisfied that the remains of the hero would at last have an opportunity of giving honor where honor was due.

It was decided to have the coffin opened by a commissary of police who had been his friend. M. Simoneau was the coroner's name.

The search was discovered when a letter was brought to light describing the funeral following closely the actual burial place. The archives which would have told were burned in the Commune of 1871.

It was decided to have the coffin opened by a medical school, where Drs. Capitan and Papillant, both of whom are recognized authorities on such investigations, made a thorough examination. General Porter furnished them with certificates and credentials, two boards by Houlth and authentic descriptions of the color of the Admiral's hair and the height and measurement of his body.

Facts Were Substantiated.

After the most minute examination the following facts were duly substantiated:

Length of body, five feet seven inches. the Admiral's exact height.

Hair—dark brown, the same as the Admiral's, in spite of the body's age, indicating a person of his age, forty-five years.

Body—broad in the shoulders, the shoulders and is combed back and gathered in a clasp at the back of the head.

The face is clean shaved, all corresponding exactly with the authentic portraits and busts of the Admiral.

There is no good condition. One artery bears an initial, either "J" or an inverted "G."

The body was carefully packed. The limbs were wrapped in tin foil, presumably for sea transportation, as indicated in a letter of the Admiral's nearest friend to Minister Jefferson, at Fontainebleau, Blackden, who said:

"His body was put in a leaden coffin, so that in case the United States, which he had served so gallantly and well during his remains, they might be more easily removed."

Finding that all the internal organs were well preserved, the decision was made at once to have a post mortem examination by the country's physicians, as he was duly recommended. How it will be done is not known yet, but undoubtedly it will be done in accordance with the rites of the French shore, that the casket will be placed aboard with fitting reverence and ceremony, as indicated by a letter of the Admiral's nearest friend to Minister Jefferson, at Fontainebleau, Blackden, who said:

"His body was put in a leaden coffin, so that in case the United States, which he had served so gallantly and well during his remains, they might be more easily removed."

Napoleon exclaimed of him: "He died as he lived, and the dead France would have had an admiral." It was an appreciation of the world's fame as he duly received was the gold medal presented him after his famous battle with the Serapis, in which he fought with his ship sinking to the British, ship's side and pulled down the English flag. If he could get it back, the country he secured much abroad, for Louis XVI and Catherine of Russia made him an admiral.

To Pay Honor Long Due.

There remains now but the necessary precautions to have the body brought back to the country which he here so duly defended. How it will be done is not known yet, but undoubtedly it will be done in accordance with the rites of the French shore, that the casket will be placed aboard with fitting reverence and ceremony, as indicated in a letter of the Admiral's nearest friend to Minister Jefferson, at Fontainebleau, Blackden, who said:

LEADERS OF WOMEN SAY TWO CHILDREN ENOUGH

National Council Characterizes Roosevelt's Views as "Sentimental Gush."

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—President Roosevelt's views on race suicide were decided opposed and characterized as "sentimental gush" by the members of the National Council of Women. These women set four as the ideal number in a family, but incidentally at the convention here Miss Susan B. Anthony declared in favor of different number than four. Views were stated to be freed from some men. Despite this view, however, a resolution against divorce was passed.

Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw led the attack against President Roosevelt's propaganda for large families. She voiced her opinion as to whether the race was worth saving.

"When we speak of race suicide, we fail to reflect whether the race be really worth saving," she said. "If it be worth saving, then it should be preserved. Some specimens of the race are worth preserving, but others are not.

"Prevention less too much stress on motherhood. How can he defend motherhood when the very conditions wars which take so many of the men of the land, and which leave so many, even in the army, are advised not to marry? Is not the duty of fatherhood as great as that of motherhood?

Miss Susan B. Anthony also declined to support the President.

The divorce resolution was adopted after a bitter protest had been uttered by Miss Anthony.

"I do not believe that divorce always brings a blessing," she said. "I am not in accepting the decisions of the bishops as conclusive. I do not believe that the women here should say there shall be no divorce. The church is not taking an oft-uttered step when it absolutely refuses to grant it.

"I do not believe that the women were consulted when the bishops at Boston rendered their decisions on divorces.

"I would never favor a resolution which will cut women off from refuge from lodging."

President Roosevelt's propaganda is favored by Dr. Lillian Rollister, who is among the women gathered here for the National Council of Women.

Following are some opinions collected from women who are prominent in the CONVENTION AMERICAN:

Mrs. Ella Miller, superintendent of Soldiers' Widows' Home at Wilmington, Ill.:

"I am in favor of quality rather than quantity in families. Not more than two children, and I think that's enough. Where children are plentiful enough they can be brought up properly, not only from a financial view point, but also from a physical view point."

Mrs. Dr. Charlotte H. Woolley of Brooklyn, N. Y.:

"Responsibility on Mother."

"There should be no more children in a family than can be brought up and educated properly. I don't think that even 4 wealthy family can bring up a large number of children properly. Responsibility devolves upon the mother, and consequently the number of children in a family usually thinks his duty fulfilled when he gives his necessary financial support to his children, thus leaving the whole manner of education and moral training with the mother."

Mrs. Emeline Seibens of Toledo, Ohio:

"First of all, there should be ideal conditions before the marriage ceremony should be allowed to take place. Then there would be very few cases of unhealthy and criminally inclined children. Some people should be restricted from marrying. I think only two to four children is the ideal number."

Mrs. Gertrude Boyd La DuBois of Idaho:

"President Roosevelt deplored the life of that woman who has never known the love or winning ways of children. I think" that each child as it comes into the family is an added blessing, provided, of course, that the child's family is able to properly support and educate them."

Miss Adelphine of the District Jewish Association:

"Quality, Not Quantity."

"There is no question but that quality is preferred to quantity. I heartily endorse the President's attitude as being based upon the broadest comprehension of the situation."

Mrs. Lillian Hollister, presiding officer of the Maccabees:

"Most assuredly quality should take precedence over quantity in this as in all other matters. Unless a child is carefully reared in the home, we have no hope to attain that perfect manhood that counts for good citizenship and on which the safety of children outweighs the ability of the parents to personally care for them. Bringing up, there is always a chance of evil resulting through neglect."

Mrs. B. O. Lefetra, representing the Ladies of the Maccabees of America:

"Every thinking man and woman will indorse the United Families Idea. The welfare of all, the home as well as the nation—in fact, our world wide kingdom rests on the principle of health. Personally I feel that it is a task in rearing two children exhausted about all the energy in my makeup. I agree with the verdict be quality rather than quantity."

FOUR OUT FOR PARKER'S PLACE

There is every prospect of a lively fight for the Republican nomination for Attorney-General to succeed Hon. Henry M. Attorney who will refuse to allow his name to be used again. The latest aspirant for the office is General Edgar R. Champlin of Lynnfield, who was prominently mentioned for the place before Mr. Parker was nominated.

District Attorney Sanderson of Middlesex has already announced that he would run for Governor. Hon. Joseph Malone of Greenfield is also in the field, and it is probable that District Attorney Asa P. French of Plymouth will enter the lists.

The candidacy of General Champlin will divide the Middlesex County Republicans, as both he and Mr. Sanderson have many enthusiastic supporters in that county. Colonel L. E. Benton is out for the office, and he will get a large support in the Middlesex Club, of which he is president.

"I have decided to be a candidate," says General Champlin. "For about two years friends have urged me to run, and I have received such definite assurance of support in all counties, thus leaving the whole matter of election and nomination entirely with the people."

Mrs. Emeline Seibens of Toledo, Ohio:

"First of all, there should be ideal conditions before the marriage ceremony should be allowed to take place. Then there would be very few cases of unhealthy and criminally inclined children. Some people should be restricted from marrying. I think only two to four children is the ideal number."

Mrs. Gertrude Boyd La DuBois of Idaho:

"President Roosevelt deplored the life of that woman who has never known the love or winning ways of children. I think"

NEW HAVEN ROAD TO JOIN SUBWAY

NEW YORK, April 15.—The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad will be joined to New York's subway. The alliance between the Metropolitan traction interests and the New Haven road is now complete in fact, for the report has been confirmed by officials of the big railroad.

The New Haven road will connect with the proposed subway at the Willis avenue station, where passengers will transfer to the subway and ride into the heart of the city. The new road will run from there on the surface line of the Metropolitan. This means that the New Haven road will have an inlet to the heart of the city without purchasing any of the terminals of the New York Central road, as now.

MAYOR ILL; NO CONFERENCE

Because of the indisposition of Mayor Collins, the conference planned for to-day between the Mayor and a committee from the Boot and Shoe Association, relative to appointment of an election commissioner to succeed Hon. Edward F. Atkinson, is postponed until Monday morning. General Charles H. Taylor, jr., of the Boston Post was at the City Hall to-day to attend the meeting as a member of the bar committee.

WEEP TO LEAVE STEP-FATHER

Despite the tears and entreaties of the three step-children of Frank Silsson, a carpenter living at 25 Dorchester street, South Boston, Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court to-day ordered the children taken from their home and sent to the Horrison Avenue Home for Destitute Children. The children are Timothy J., twelve years; Daniel F., eleven years, and Nellie M., seven years.

Daniel J. Conley, their father, died three years ago. His mother, Mrs. Nellie Conley, married Silsson. One week ago she left her husband and children and interested the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in the case, learning that owing to the destitute condition of their step-father the children be sent to a home.

HELEN KELLER MAKES APPEAL FOR SIGHTLESS LITTLE ONES

'GOD HAS WORK FOR BLIND TO DO,' SHE SAYS

Society Gathers to Hear Wonderful Blind Woman at Bay State Road Home.

RABBI FLEISCHER SPEAKS

For the benefit of the Blind Babies' Nursery at Roxbury, society flocked to the home of Mrs. Edwin Nelson Curtis, No. 131 Bay State road, when Miss Helen Keller, and Rabbi Fleischer spoke in behalf of the needs of sightless infants, and Mrs. Gladys Fogg Benedict and Wilhelm Heinrich sang groups of songs and John Orth gave piano solos.

The drawing room, music room and reception hall were all filled and many people stood patiently during Miss Keller's address.

Mrs. Curtis, charming in an exquisite princess gown of palest gray liberty crepe with strappings of broadcloth and quantities of Val lace, received the guests, being assisted by John Albert Macy, the fiance of Miss Keller's teacher, Miss Annie Mansfield Sullivan.

Miss Keller speaks in a low, well modulated voice, but her enunciation is not quite clear to those unacquainted with her speech. Therefore Miss Sullivan repeated each sentence after her.

Knows Needs of Blind.

This remarkable young woman, whose career has held the interest and aroused the sympathy of the entire world, seemed quite glorified by the sincerity and earnestness with which she handled the subject so near to her heart. No one living knows so well the needs of the blind babies as does Miss Keller. No one recognizes so keenly what education means to them. No one would give more freely of every means at her command to help them.

"Since the days of Dr. Howe," said Miss Keller, "almost nothing has been done for the adult blind, until the movement started two years ago, and even there the work for babies has hardly more than begun.

"If Boston has neglected these two classes it was because she did not realize that they were not provided for, that there was great work for the blind does only part of the work. What she most needs is wisdom and extend her efforts to their widest embrace until she has gathered in all the blind of the State."

In speaking of the contrast between those who were listening and those for whom she was pleading, Miss Keller used these words:

"You who delight in the morning sun and in the beauties of the night, you whose ears are full of unregarded music, you who can go about God's world as you will, bethrroth you who have vision to listen to our prayer in behalf of God's little ones, who must begin life in the dark, grow up in the dark, learn to work in the dark and die in the dark."

"Work for the Blind."

Helen Keller believes thoroughly in a great sphere of usefulness for those to whom light has been denied, and it is largely on this ground that she urges so earnestly the early education of blind children, that they may be prepared to take advantage of the place there is for them.

"God has work somewhere for the blind as well as they can do anywhere else," she declared, her face radiant with earnestness. "Yes," she continued, "they are doing it every day in their brave, gaitied lives. They are teaching you that there are finer things in the world than you have suspected—things of endurance, patience, sweetness and courage that can bear the cruelest blow without a touch of bitterness."

In closing she made a plea that those whose children were blessed with all natural gifts would rejoice in their disaster in the lives of the unfortunate little ones.

In Rabbi Fleischer's address, he called much attention to the fact that these children are blind at birth, but that the majority have organic diseases of their parents to thank for their misfortune.

"Face Facts and Proceed."

"We are careful in the breeding of horses, dogs, cats, all animals," he declared, "but we allow human beings to breed promiscuously.

"Society should pay the price for its carelessness.

"Society is to blame and this thought should be a stimulus to our social responsibility.

"We are called upon to provide a palliative for this evil, as for many others because we have not applied a preventive.

"We should be more careful of our marriage relationship, and have more regard for the responsibility of parenthood."

In closing, Dr. Fleischer gave as a practical motto for life, "Face facts and proceed," a sentiment which called forth applause.

"We are prone to face most of our facts," he said, "and to close our eyes upon them."

After the lecture people were eager to meet Miss Keller. Many had never seen her. All marveled at her beauty, at her air of medium height, fairly plump and extremely healthful in appearance. Her face is sweetly serious. Her handclasp is hearty. Her voice low and vibrating.

She wore yesterday a suit of blue with touches of white and a blue hat, and seemed quite as much at ease and as sure of herself as any one present.

CLEANS TEETH OF BOSTON DOG

NEW YORK, April 15.—A woman who said she was Mrs. Conover entered the veterinary hospital at No. 117 West Twenty-fifth street on Wednesday. At her side was a large and valuable Yorkshire dog. The woman asked for the head veterinarian.

"I have come all the way from Boston," she said, "to have this dog's teeth cleaned. Will you be able to do the work?"

Dr. Armstrong, one of the leading veterinarians of the hospital, was consulted and was consulted. He quickly decided to grant the novel request and the dog was therefore led at the climb.

The following day the dog was put on the operating table and then etherized. When it was unconscious an instrument was put in its mouth to keep it from moving the jaw. The work of cleaning the animal's teeth was then begun. The animal was kept on the table for about an hour and yesterday it was under the ether for about two hours.

The woman and the dog left last night for Boston.

Penniman is chairman, has had charge of the programme, which is now completed and includes patriotic salutes, bell ringing, parades and concerts.

UNKNOWN MAN ENDS LIFE IN NORTON WOOD

NORTON, April 15.—With a gaping wound in his head and a revolver by his side, a man was found unconscious in the woods near Wheaton Seminary by H. A. Pinkham, Jr. He was taken to the Town Farm, where he died a few hours later without regaining consciousness. There is no clue to his identity.

CARRIE NATION GUILTY.

WICHITA, Kan., April 15.—Carrie Nation, Myra McHenry and Mrs. Lucy Wilson, who broke the windows of a wholesale liquor house, have had sentence suspended.

BELL FAILS TO SCARE RATS

GREAT BARRINGTON, April 15.—Thinking the noise would scare the rats which kept him awake nights, J. R. McComb caught one of the rodents and turned it loose in the walls of the house after tying a bell round its neck. Now he wishes he hadn't. The rat hasn't driven the others out, but the bell rat is livelier than ever and at all hours of the night can be heard scampering through the walls.

Mr. McComb says that hereafter he will rely on arsenic to rid himself of the pests.

DOZENS DIE OF EPIDEMIC

RENO, Nev., April 15.—A terrible disease has broken out in Tonopah which the doctors are unable to check. Inhabitants of that town are coming into Reno by scores to escape its ravages. No explanation as to the cause has yet been made.

Governor Sparks will appoint a special commission to go to Tonopah to check the disease, which is killing people at the rate of from five to a dozen each day. The disease brings death in twelve to twenty-four hours. The bodies become black after death.

$25,000 WILL CASE BROUGHT TO CLOSE

LACONIA, N. H., April 15.—The Crockett-Carley will case, which has been on trial in the Superior Court before Judge Stone, is closed.

Mrs. Carley, of Laconia, in attempting to break her sister's will says that her sister was insane when she made the will. The court house was crowded, as the case involves the distribution of the $25,000 estate of the late J. Frank Crockett of this city. Judge Stone has reserved his decision.

HYDE HAS PAID $135,000 AS RESTITUTION

$13,000 Allotted as Share in Payment of the Famous Cambon Dinner.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 15.—James H. Hyde, vice-president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, who has been charged with the misuse of its funds, has made restitution to the extent of $135,000.

Of the $135,000 refunded to the Equitable society $13,000 represented a share of the cost of the now famous dinner given by Mr. Hyde and Senator Chauncey M. Depew to Jules Cambon, former Ambassador from France to the United States.

The balance of the $135,000 restored to the policy holders by young Mr. Hyde—$122,000—represents Mr. Hyde's share of the profits on two syndicate underwritings by which he and other directors in the Equitable dumped securities on the society of which they are all officers. In many ventures in which Mr. Hyde has taken part during the last few years he has had as associates E. H. Harriman, George J. Gould, Jacob H. Schiff and Henry C. Frick.

Frick Is Chairman.

Mr. Frick is chairman of the committee of seven directors appointed by the Equitable to ferret out wrongdoings in its management. E. H. Harriman is also a member of the committee. Mr. Schiff is Mr. Harriman's closest financial associate.

It is declared that Mr. Hyde and his close associates in the Equitable have been interested during the last few years in underwriting syndicates which have sold to them $20,000,000 of securities of the Equitable.

The most interesting development of yesterday was the discovery that Fred Eckly E. Alexander, a son of James Alexander, will appear on the report to be made to Mr. Frick and his colleagues as one of the men who have profited largely in the past few years in dealings with the Equitable.

F. E. Alexander is a member of the banking firm of Alexander, Thomas & Colby, at No. 30 Pine street.

It is said that a conservative estimate of the profits he has made from their Equitable dealings is $150,000 annually.

Other Alexanders Prominent.

Other men sharing the name of Alexander also will figure prominently among those who will be shown to have received compensation from the Equitable. Prominent among these, from the fact that his salary is said to exceed $20,000 annually, is William Alexander, a brother of the president.

H. M. Alexander of the law firm of Alexander & Colby is a son of James W., and his colleague, Bainbridge Colby, is appearing as counsel for the society in the litigation begun by stockholders.

Henry C. Alexander & Colby. It is stated, for years has been receiving substantial money from the Equitable for legal advice.

James Gilchrist, head of the securities department of the Equitable, is a nephew of James W. Alexander's wife. His compensation is not excessive, it is said that he receives considerably less than $10,000.

C. B. Alexander, a cousin of James W., and a member of the firm of Alexander & Green, is another of the president's relatives who has received large payments. But it happens that he is an adherent of Mr. Hyde, and it is due to Mr. Hyde that he has participated in the distribution of Equitable money.

MAINE TOWN DESTROYED BY $300,000 FIRE

Practically the Whole Business Section of Springvale Laid Waste.

SPRINGVALE, Me., April 15.—Two large shoe factories, four large blocks, eighteen stores, four dwellings, twenty-three tenements, a newspaper office, a hotel, three stables, the Masonic, Odd Fellows', Grand Army, Grange, Golden Cross, Red Men's and American Mechanics' halls, a carpenter shop, a blacksmith shop and an engine house were burned by a fire that swept over ten acres and caused a loss of $300,000 in this town.

The fire started in the boiler room of the shoe factory of W. H. Usher & Son, a four-story wooden building, facing Bridge street. The failure of the water supply was largely responsible for the spread of the flames. The village has a fine hydrant and pipe line, but the pressure of water was entirely inadequate.

Baptist Church Saved.

The Sanford department, two miles away, responded to the emergency call. Its firemen coming over with their hose wagons, but the hydrants were of practically no use. The Sanford mills have a steam fire engine for their own protection. This was hauled over by road, and, taking water at the Baptist Church, directed attention to the Free Baptist Church, facing the shoe factory on Pleasant street. The church was saved, but John H. Goodwin's two tenement houses, near the church, and his stables in the rear were burned. The Revere flames was waiting, burning rubbers in every direction. In Bridge street the conflagration spread, toward the village square, sweeping everything on both sides of the street.

All the structures in town were of wood, and most of those in the path of the flames succumbed. In the village square, at the junction of Bridge and Main streets, were two large three-story blocks, containing stores, offices and public halls. They became the easy prey of the flames, which later spread in both directions on Main street and crossed to Bridge street.

Building Dynamited.

The only hotel in town, located on Main street, about 200 rods south of the square, was saved by the use of dynamite in destroying a small building owned by N. W. Fogg. The verge of the flames was a little heavier than was required, but the dynamite robbed the Postoffice across the street, of its front windows.

In response to a telephone call, Portland sent a fire engine and a hose truck, the thirty-mile run over the Western division of the Boston & Maine being made in forty-two minutes. The fire was practically checked when the Portland department arrived, but appreciated assistance was rendered.

SUICIDE PUTS FIRM IN RECEIVER'S HANDS

"MARRIAGE WASN'T SECRET, 'TWAS ONLY NOT ANNOUNCED"

MRS. H. C. BAILEY.

BRIDE IN EVERETT ROMANCE.

Young Everett Bride Doesn't Understand Why Her Friends Were Surprised at Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Bailey, the young Everett couple who were married on Sunday last and whose home has created much interest in Everett, are receiving the congratulations of their friends and getting ready to settle down to housekeeping.

"It wasn't really secret," said the bride, who was Miss Jeannette L. Handlen of No. 22 Cottage street, "although we didn't announce it to anyone outside our families. We had been engaged for about two years, and there wasn't any reason why anybody should be surprised. My sister knew of it and so did his parents, of course, but we had to get their permission, you know, being only twenty."

The bride is the same age. She has hundreds of friends in Everett, where she has worked in a confectionery store for some time. Bailey is the son of Patrolman William H. Bailey, formerly police captain in Everett. He is an electrical inspector for the State street telegraph company in Boston, and has lived with his parents at No. 31 Buckman street.

Mrs. Bailey's parents live in Stoneham, Mass. She is very proud of her young husband. "How could I help it," she said yesterday. "He's a handsome fellow. Any girl couldn't help liking him."

COLOR CHANGE ON MARS IS DUE TO VEGETATION

Professor Lowell Says Brown Tint Results From the Denuded Soil.

FLAGSTAFF, Ari., April 15.—Professor Percival Lowell, in charge of the Lowell Observatory here, gives the following account of the observations of Mars, showing the change in color of the erythraeum sea:

"The recent telegraphic announcement to the astronomical world that on the morning of April 4 observations on Mars showed the first appearance of the color of the mare erythraeum (the erythraeum sea) is significant in that it is a striking corroboration of the latest theory about this canal as to the seasonal change of the Martian physical features.

"The mare erythraeum lie between ten and thirty degrees south latitude, and just above the gulf-like marking shown as the syrtis major. Of the large dark regions upon the planet the characteristic color is blue green, but the tint deepens or lightens according to the season of the Martian year. The change in the color of the mare erythraeum from blue green to brown, observed here on April 4, we now know to be of a temporary and a seasonal nature.

"At the next presentation, on April 4, on coming again into view the region in question was at once seen to have changed tint, being now of a pronounced brown. The season of the Martian year in that hemisphere corresponded then to about 24 of our own chronology.

"The first symptom of the change of color that has just been observed was discovered here by the writer and the mare erythraeum on April 19, 1903, when this region, previously blue green, had turned to a pronounced brown tint, though to such color had been observed in it thirty seven days before. At the next favorable occasion for observation of this region, in the last part of May, the brownish color was general, except at the extreme south.

"The change observed may be best explained by supposing it to be due to vegetation. The blue-green is without much question due to vegetation and the brown color assumed by the sea at what we know to be its dead season, is a familiar and very suggestive inference that it is the denuded soil itself exposed to view."

GARLAND IS SAFE.

ST. ANDREWS, N. B., April 15.—The fishing schooner J. E. Garland, concerning whose safety fears had been expressed, has arrived here.

BONDS IN DEMAND.

The Douglas Copper Issue May Be Oversubscribed.

There has been a demand throughout the week for the 6 per cent. convertible bonds of the Douglas Copper company, which will be sold at par. Subscription as high as 104 at the office of C. F. King, a financial agent, Monday morning. It is said there is prospect that the first allotment, to the amount of $250,000, will be oversubscribed before April 20, the date set for closing the list.

The bonds represent a 50% mortgage on all the property of the company, which is valued at $1,000,000. Each bond has back of it, not less than sharing stock. The issue has been made to provide funds for building a large smelter at the mines in Sonora, Mex.

TRADE SCHOOL DEBATE AT CAMBRIDGE

Peter W. Collins Says They Make Strike-Breakers and Are Not Needed Here.

SKEFFINGTON FAVORS THEM

The question of trades schools was argued before the Cambridge Central Labor Union, with Peter W. Collins, business agent for the Boston Electrical Workers' Union No. 103, opposing them, and Henry J. Skeffington speaking in their favor. Mr. Collins said in part:

"Industrially the trade school is a menace, as it is only an effort at best to fit the child worker with a smattering of knowledge of a craft. It does not thoroughly fit for workmanship in any craft. It makes an indolent workman, a mercenary without the thorough knowledge of perfection that is necessary for active and successful work in craftsmanship.

"The trade schools of Europe are in their tendency on American soil tend to lower the standard of living, and their graduating classes are recruited from the strike-breaking craft, whose influence is to lower the life of the community.

"The people do not need industrial schools. The organization of labor is better before trade schools were established. This is the lesson of Europe in trade schools.

"Organized labor will have its own university of labor before long—one not dependent on favors from the capitalistic class such as Carnegie and Rockefeller.

"Massachusetts gives more than any other State in the Union in education, and there is no place for any unnecessary frills in the schools of our State.

"In his address Mr. Skeffington laid stress on the fact that the working people of Massachusetts are sending an average less a year more wages than those in other States and attributed the fact to the trade schools. Mr. Skeffington further said:

"The more education we give to our children the more they are worth.

"We recognize that there is no stronger force in the community for the preservation of the trade unions than the trade unions. We know that education is never a detriment to the children of the people in those hands are placed the destinies of our free institutions.

"Practical education is what the people want for their children. We want our children to learn that which will be the most useful to them in their workaday life. And it is a good thing for ourselves to have continuation schools, it is certainly a good thing for our children. Learning will not make a bad workman, and it will per make a bad trade unionist."

JOHNSON WANTS TO MEET HART AGAIN

BALTIMORE, April 15.—Big Jack Johnson, who recently lost on points to Marvin Hart in San Francisco, walked into Manager Al Heyfer's office this morning and very quietly announced that he had come East for another match with Hart.

Johnson said he hardly cares what the terms of the match are. He will agree to anything just to get Hart into a ring again.

Johnson said that he beat Hart in Frisco, and would prove it if he ever was given a chance. He said Referee Gregghis gave Hart the decision for his aggressiveness, despite that he (Johnson) had forced Hart to the ropes time and again, Johnson said:

"If Hart will only box me again I will beat him in each and every round we box. If I fail to beat him in any one round I will give him the entire purse. I don't care if the bout is for ten, twenty or more rounds, my offer holds good just the same.

"If I succeed in making good my assertion to beat him in a second go-round will split the purse in two with him. I am ready to make the match now, to take place in Baltimore or anywhere else. However, if I fail for the present I will probably box Morris Harris in Philadelphia, or any other heavyweight who will meet me.

About two years ago Johnson was matched to meet Young Peter Jackson for twelve rounds in Butte, Mont. The match fell through because the club could not get the license. Johnson said he is ready to renew that match now if it is possible, but that he no longer considers Jackson in his class, having grown far too big for the Baltimore fighter. Johnson says his business is fighting, and that he is open to talk business with any of them.

HANLON TO MEET "FITZ"

Eddie Hanlon and Willie Fitzgerald have been matched to fight twenty rounds at San Francisco on April 27. The conditions of the match are 100 pounds at 6 o'clock and fifty-five per cent. of the gross receipts to be split, seventy-five per cent. to the winner and twenty-five to the loser.

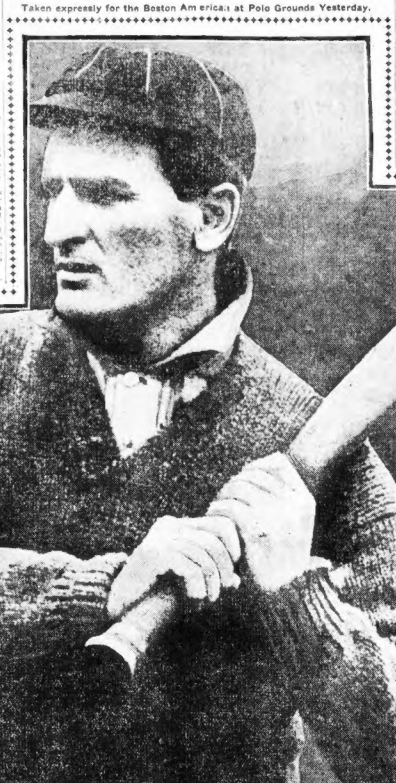
WOLVERTON OF NATIONALS

Taken expressly for the Boston American at Polo Grounds Yesterday.



This is a picture of Harry Wolverton, the third baseman of the Hub Nationals, who was procured in a trade with the Phillies, along with Chick Fraser, for Pitcher Pittenger. Many fans in this city consider Wolverton the finest third baseman in the National League. He is very handy with the willow, while in the field he carries himself with an ease and a grace of a Collins and gets away with a lot of hair-raising stunts. "Wolvy" has never appeared in this city in a Boston uniform, and he will undoubtedly receive a cordial welcome when the Tenneyites open the season here next Tuesday against the Brooklyns.

HARVARD NINE WILL PLAY WEST POINT TEAM TODAY

The Harvard baseball team, accompanied by a large number of substitutes, left Cambridge on their annual Southern trip. The squad will be gone ten days, but during that time will play three games, one with West Point, this afternoon, the other two with Annapolis. Trinity game has been cancelled for reasons not known.

As Georgetown is not played on the trip, as in former years, the Harvard men are looking for no particularly hard games. The men will stay a whole week in Annapolis and during that time Captain Randall hopes that his team will make great strides. Dr. Nichols, the veteran director of Harvard baseball, will be with the team in Annapolis and will coach the Crimson players.

"Bob" Keenan will also be with the team, and will devote his time to coaching the battery candidates, of which eight men were taken. Fitz of these, Coburn, Taylor, Castle, B. T. Stephenson and Snyder are pitchers.

Matthews, the colored short stop on the Harvard team, who did not go on the Southern trip with his team last year on account of the feeling among the Southern teams on account of his color, went with the squad.

Before the cancelation of the two games as above stated, it was said that Matthews would not go, and his appearance on the trip may explain that somewhat unexpected change in the Crimson's schedule.

As the team will play West Point this afternoon several changes are noted. Keenan, who has hitherto been playing centre field, has been shifted to left field, where he played before going to second base last year. Maher, who has been playing left field so far went to right, supplanting McCarthy; and Schoenfus, because of his superior hitting was put in centre field. Coburn will pitch to-day.

The following players were taken on the trip: R. K. Stephenson, Kemble, Tweed, Cunningham, Taylor, Coburn, Castle, Schoenfus, B. T. Stephenson, H. D. Kernan, Bradbury, C. R. Leonard, Dexter Maher, Giles, Mitchell, McCarty, Greenough, Snyder and Captain Randall; Coach Murphy, Trainer McMasters, Manager Thornton, Assistant Manager Kelly and R. P. Kernan, '03, accompanied the team. Dr. Nichols will join the team at Annapolis and coach the nine. R. P. Kernan will coach the battery candidates on the trip.

CREWS:

Harvard varsity crew underwent an upheaval. "Ted" Meier, who rowed No. 6 on the crew last year, but who on the first selection this season was put on the second crew, was again transferred to his old position at No. 5, and Flint, the veteran who has been rowing No. 3, was relegated to the second boat, his place being filled by Toppan of last year's freshman crew.

The varsity rowed as follows: Stroke, Farley; 7, George; 6, Filley; 5, Meier; 4, McLeod; 3, Toppan; 2, Judd; bow, Burdard.

The varsity rowed against the scrub, and although the time was not given out it was stated that the showing was very creditable.

A comparison has been made between the hitting last year and that of the year before. In 1904, ninety National League players fell behind in their 1903 figures, while thirty-three gained. In the American League forty-eight gained, but seventy-three fell off. What will this season bring forth?

Batting is certainly on the decrease.

The drunken delivery, stop ball, fadeaway ball, spit ball, whirligig ball and all the other fillings, including the good old fashioned high, fast one, will be on tap now. But, at the end of the season, the sinners will be the pitchers with the strong arm, standard deliveries, stout heart and good heads. Only these will wear in the wash.

The Champs were coming along on the R. O. G. taking the bends, when they reached at sixty miles an hour. All was silent in the sleeper except the snore made by the struggles of the men in the uppers to keep their heads. Suddenly the voice of one upstairs rook parted and Hobe Ferris's head popped out. "Say, porter," he yelled to the boy who was gathering up the shoes, "tell that engineer to cut out those curves and give us some fast ones."

COLLINS'S MEN HOPE TO TURN TABLES IN PHILADELPHIA TO-DAY

JESSE TANNEHILL WILL TWIRL AGAINST MACK'S ATHLETICS

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL,

Staff Correspondent of the Boston American With the Champion American League Team.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—Well, we lost the first one; but there are still 153 to be played, so cheer up. The BOSTON AMERICAN kept the Boston fans pretty well supplied with baseball reading yesterday, and if you read the editions carefully you had an accurate account of what happened on the opening day of the baseball season.

The baseball extra issued as soon as the game was over told you just how the battle was fought. Then, twelve hours later, this morning's Boston papers repeated the dose in different words, so if there is a person within 100 miles of the Hub who doesn't know how the Champs lost by a score of 3 to 2, that person cares not for baseball.

For the moment this dispatch will drop all mention of yesterday's game and deal with what is on the tapis for this afternoon.

Tannehill Will Pitch.

Jesse Tannehill, the great little left-handed pitcher, will occupy the pitcher's box to-day. Collins has selected him to open the season. Tannehill was the greatest "road" pitcher in the business last season; that is to say, he won more games when the Bostons were playing in foreign cities than any other pitcher in the league.

Tannehill is in fine form. Young in years, but old in the game, this crafty southpaw made no foolish training moves. He reported at Macon and began his practice with the rest. But he went very slowly, and one day just before the team left Macon he took a workout of over an hour, after which he announced that he was ready to begin the season. He has kept himself in edge ever since, and is in prime shape to face the Athletics this afternoon. Of course Connie Mack's men may solve his southpaw slants and flat out a victory, but if they do they will have to be classed as good guessers.

Doran Will Catch.

Tom Doran will go behind the bat. He will not be allowed to make the mistake he was guilty of at Cincinnati the other day, when with two out and men on first and third he threw to second to catch a base stealer, allowing the runner on third to score. He threw the ball down without a signal, when the man off first had secured a big lead. Collins purposely allowing him to have his own way, as he knew he would handle himself in the emergency. To-day the Boston captain will have to say in every move that is made on the offense, so that Doran, in future, will not make any mistakes.

Against Tannehill and Doran the Athletics will, according to present plans, present Plank and Bowers.

Plank is a left hander, as well as Tannehill, and he has a most perplexing delivery throw, which has heretofore bothered the Boston players not a little. In a memorable game last Fall he held the Champions down to a fluke run and two in the twelfth or thirteenth inning and had no one of Cy Young's big balls for a single that won his own game, 1 to 0.

It is not to be expected that a wonderful contest will be duplicated to-day, but if the weather is anywhere near pleasant thousands of Quakers will go to the ball park hoping for just such a game.

Champs Won't Stay at Bottom Long.

For the Champions are at the foot of the baseball ladder, but it is not expected that they will stay there long. This is the season for violent shifts in the percentage columns. As told in a BOSTON AMERICAN extra yesterday, it was intended to keep the Boston team intact until the presentation was finished, but it was later decided to send one of the men to Boston instead of taking all hands to Washington.

There will arrive in Boston this morning Lee Keyes, Bert Sessions, Harry Olmstead and Fred O'Brien. Criger went with the others because his injured knee will prevent his catching for a few days. He hopes that it will have healed by next Friday, so that he can be in harness for the opening game on the Huntington Avenue grounds.

As for the others, they were sent home because they will not be of any use on the present trip. Collins will not decide upon going to Washington until he gets to Boston, but the chances are O'Brien, Sessions and Olmstead will be left behind. Olmstead has shown very well in Spring practice, but he is a little fellow, and besides he needs more experience. Hilen and Sessions have not shown the necessary "get-there" spirit that is essential for such a club as Collins handles.

Keeler, the New Bedford boy, is evidently well thought of or he would not be kept with the team. With Criger out of the running for the present and Farrell not yet in form, Keeler, although he caught a very good game yesterday, Collins wisely kept McGovern with the team, Doran being the only other catcher under contract.

Winter Has Signed.

George Winter has finally signed with the Boston club, and everything is satisfactory. As intimated frequently in these dispatches, Winter is likely to prove a valuable man to the Champs this year. He told me this morning that for the first time in two years he felt strong enough to pitch an entire game. He has the spitball down to a fine point. The report that he had quit the game and gone home in disgust to Lancaster, Pa., was true only to the extent that he always goes home when the Boston club comes to Philadelphia. He went to see his folks; that was all.

No need to dwell on yesterday's game. The Athletics got a lead of three runs in the first eight innings and it looked like a shut out for the Bostons, as they had only made two safe hits off Bender up to the ninth, but the Champs are stickers, and come within an inch of turning defeat into victory.

Parent in the ninth led off with a fine base hit into the right field crowd. Stahl fouled-fled to Lave Cross. Collins was out, from pitcher to first. Freeman drew a base on balls. Lachance rapped a two-bagger, which hit the wire screen on top of the right field fence.

This scored Parent and put Freeman on third. Ferris drew a pass, filling the bases. Selbach was sent in to bat for Doran, and after much monkey business succeeded in getting a base on balls, forcing Freeman across the plate.

Englaish batted for Young and he tried to draw a pass also. He nearly did it, but fouled the ball going an inch or two outside the plate, but Umpire O'Loughlin called it a third strike, and the game was over.

SOME DIAMOND DUST.

President Taylor did not see the finish of the game, going after Winter he took a train for New York.

Bender did not use the spit ball until in the seventh inning of the game. He attempts to use it were abortive and he had to fall back on his curves.

Cy tried a new underhand delivery once or twice, but he could not locate the plate with it, and so it may be valuable to him.

The Champs knocked up a lot of easy flies.

Farrell caught the two men who tried to steal on him. The Athletics did not hesitate to make a dash for second whenever they had a chance.

Lachance's error in the first inning was no surprising that he forgot to chase the easy grounder that went through his hands. The misplay cost nothing to Boston.

Knight, who took Monte Cross's place, looks good. Monte was put out of business when Cy hit him on the wrist with a pitched ball.

Cy and the Duke got mixed on their signals several times. Farrell is not used to catching Young's curves. Criger is the old gentleman's side partner usually.

CHICK FRASER SLATED TO SERVE UP PELLETS

MATTHEWSON MAY DO BOX WORK FOR NEW YORK GIANTS TO-DAY.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Chick Fraser is likely to face the Giants in behalf of the Boston Nationals to-day, while Christy Matthewson is likely to adorn the rubber for the home team. Mathewson hopes to hand the battle as easily as yesterday's.

As for the game yesterday, it was the same old story when Iron Man McGinnity faces the Boston team. He worked his ball against Tenney's men throughout the nine innings. Only three singles were made, one by Lauterborn and one each by the two pitchers, Wilhelm and Young.

The work of the Giants showed the excellent effect of their Spring training, both at the bat and in the field.

They gave the Iron Man brilliant support, the feature of which was a one-hand scoop by Dahlen of a vicious liner from Tenney's bat, a few inches from the ground.

Wilhelm started the game for Boston, and was in for the first five. He lasted four innings. In the fourth Mike Donlin, with two men on the bases, made the first home run of the season, and also knocked out the first three-bagger.

Cy Young, 2d, succeeded Wilhelm, and his work was the redeeming feature of the visitors' play.

MONTE ATTELL WAS FOOLED BY DOCTOR

Pugilism is a serious business, but once in a while something develops which is not entirely bereft of humor. The latest story comes from Philadelphia. It appears that Monte Attell, one of the fighting family of that ilk, was badly pummelled recently in a six round bout with Jimmy Walsh. Attell was knocked down with a solar plexus punch and he tried to make it appear that he had been struck foully.

They took him to a hospital "writhing in pain." The house surgeon could find no outward evidence of injury, but Attell continued to groan dismally.

The doctor said he thought an injection of morphine might quiet the patient. Attell tearfully begged the doctor to put the hypodermic needle to work, and the doctor did as requested. Attell immediately stopped squirming and soon "slept like a new-born babe."

"How about it, doctor?" asked some of those present.

"Just a fake," said the doctor. "I gave him an injection of distilled water."

Now it is reported that the Philadelphia promoters have asked the Attells to leave town.

BLINK WOULDN'T FIGHT.

PROVIDENCE, April 15.—The bout scheduled at the Brighton A. C. of Scituate, between Rogardus Hyde of Foster and Blink McCloskey of Boston did not take place, McCloskey refusing to go on account of the small size of the house.

AQUEDUCT TO OPEN WITH THE 'CARTER' TODAY

NEW YORK, April 15.—The Carter handicap at seven furlongs, with $5,000 added, which last year gave first public evidence to the qualities of Beldame, the mare that became the champion of the racing season, will to-day mark the inauguration of the Metropolitan season at Aqueduct.

That the handicap field will be a large one is certain, as more than twenty-one horses, among them the best performers in training, are penned as starters, and only four of these are said to be doubtful.

The horses, weights, jockeys and probable odds are as follows:

Horse, weight and jockey	Odds
Hedgeford, 122, Redfern	5 to 1
Rapid Water, 122, Knapp	4 to 1
Beldame, 122, O'Neil	4 to 1

TOMMY SULLIVAN WINS IN SECOND

Special to the Boston American.

LAWRENCE, April 15.—Tommy Sullivan of this city defeated Matty Matthews of New York before the Daily Cycle and Athletic Club in the second round.

Both showed up very clever in the first round. Matthews doing great stunts on his feet. This round ended very even.

In the second round Sullivan jumped from his corner like a wildcat and shot over his left to the jaw, but Matthews ducked and shot over a right to the stomach and clinched. Sullivan got his left to the jaw, but Matthews broke loose and made a few feints. Sullivan jumped to and landed a heavy right to the stomach, following with a left to the jaw that made Matthews bang on.

After the referee parted the fighters Sullivan came rushing in like a maddened bull and landed a vicious right to the jaw and a left to the short ribs, which knocked Matthews out.

Young Cuddy of this city knocked out Kid Sullivan of Haverhill in the second round. Willie Mack of this city and Johnny Mahan fought six fast rounds, Mack being awarded the decision at the end of the sixth. Jack Saunders of Boston put handed over a saloon to Jack Young of this city, and he lay down for the count in the first round.

ROUSE WILL MEET FELTZ AT CHELSEA

The Douglas Athletic Club will hold a meeting on Wednesday night (Patriots' Day), and Rouse O'Brien and Tommy Feltz in the feature bout is almost a certainty.

SULLIVAN TO MEET GARDNER

M'GOVERN IS HOME TO REST

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, April 15.—Terry McGovern, the pugilist, arrived from Hot Springs and went to his home in Brooklyn, where he will take a long rest. He is suffering from a nervous trouble, and it was reported that he was coming here for treatment in a sanitarium. It is believed that a complete rest at home will restore him to health.

GEORGE COLE GETS A DRAW

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—George Cole, of Philadelphia, and Ben Trimble, of California, boxed a slow six round draw at the Knickerbocker A. C. During the early rounds Cole slid all the fighting, but after the third round the Californian got busy and kept Cole on the move.

SCHEDULE IS ADOPTED.

A meeting of the executive committee of the reorganized Grammar Interscholastic Baseball League was held in the Dudley School, Dudley street, Roxbury, and a schedule for the season was adopted.

MIKE "TWIN" SCORES GAINS

Mike (Twin) Sullivan is getting hot under the collar by the way the loud-talking lightweights are having their fling about their abilities and has something to say concerning their standing.

Says Mike: "Willie Lewis's manager is around saying that he will match him against any lightweight in the world, and Gardner is saying that he will stop Britt, and Gans is blowing that no white man will meet him. Gans fought Rube Turner in Philadelphia and got $500 for his end. Now the New Bedford A. C. has offered to pay $1,000 as a guarantee, with percentage of sixty per cent. of the house, for a ten-round bout, so it looks like a case of cold feet for Gans. If Peter Sullivan, the pride of Fall River, means business he can find me ready any time.

MOWATT DREW WITH YANGER

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 15.—Benny Yanger and Tommy Mowatt fought twenty rounds to a draw. The first round was Yanger's, but after that Mowatt took the lead and maintained it throughout the fight. Neither was punished to any extent.

SHAKE-UP AT TUFTS.

The Tufts baseball team received the expected shake-up. Colegan, who covered first base, has been sent to the bench, and Riley, catcher, is covering the initial sack. Captain Smith, the oldest and most experienced player on the team, will probably have to give up baseball. Simms has played on third base for four years, and Leaden being the heaviest hitter on the nine, is the fastest fielder. Donovan, '05, was tried out in his place.

GUY ASHLEY ON HUNT FOR GAME

Guy Ashley of Fall River challenges Honey Melody, Tommy Sullivan, Peter Sullivan, Willie Lewis or Martin Canole, and they can make their own terms. George Ashley will meet any of the 135-pound boys.

* * *

Fred Douglass, the Southern champion welterweight, is still in the Hub for the purpose of getting on a return match with Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence. He claims he was defeated by a chance blow, which is liable to terminate any bout, and wants another chance to prove it.

* * *

Billy Carroll of Brockton is looking for bouts with the 130-pound boys. He wants to meet Mississippi of Philadelphia, who, of thirty-seven matches he has had two. His manager, Frank Morris of Lynn, will put up any part of $500 on his boy.

* * *

Rouse O'Brien can have a match with Jimmy Walsh if the South Boston boy will do it. His pounds ringside.

* * *

Fred Douglas now wants a return match with Tommy Sullivan at Lawrence, and is likely to get it.

* * *

The Light Infantry Boxing Club, of Detroit, Mich., will hold its next show on April 19, and is trying to get either Jimmy Briggs of Chelsea, Mass., or Willie Lewis of this city, to meet Mike Ward. Art Black and Billy Johnson have been matched to meet in the semi-windup.

* * *

"Kid" Sullivan, the Washington, D. C., featherweight, and Harry Lewis of Philadelphia have been matched to box fifteen rounds at 130 pounds, weigh in at 3 o'clock on April 28, before the Eureka A. C. of Baltimore.

* * *

Dan Mendelsohn, who is in the Hub with Tom Jenkins, the wrestler, has a few things to say regarding Al Herford's, the manager of Joe Gans, business methods. Mendelsohn is willing to match his man, Willie Lewis, against Gans, and has deposited a forfeit to that effect, but Hereford wants him to bet the money on the result at even. It looks as if Hereford was squealing in order to get out of a match at the lightweight limit of 135 pounds. It is generally known that Gans will never fight at the limit mark again, no matter how much talking Hereford does.

* * *

Jimmy Dunn, the Pittsburg featherweight, has been matched to meet Eddie Hanlon, the San Francisco featherweight, for twelve rounds at 122 pounds, weigh in at 6 p. m. before the Nonpareil Athletic Club of South Sharon, Pa., on April 22. Mayo of the miners from the western part of Pennsylvania will bet their bank roll on Dunn's chances.

* * *

Matty Matthews, the ex-welterweight champion, is still on the warpath for a fight with Bunky Ryan, the white welterweight champion, and Joe Grim, the Italian welterweight, of Philadelphia.

* * *

Jack McGuigan, the matchmaker of the National A. C. of Philadelphia, has tried to match Joe Gans, of Baltimore, and Jack Blackbourn, of Philadelphia, for six rounds at his club for a date three weeks hence. Gans will take the proposition under consideration, and it looks as if the Philadelphia boy, who beat the lightweight champion, will get another match.

* * *

Charley Dwyer, the fast Cambridge stepper, wants to stack up with Young Donahue or Tommy Quill. He had the better of Jimmy Hanlon in a recent bout, and Hanlon has a draw with Young Donahue.

* * *

If Monte Attell knocked Johnny Reagan out in seventeen rounds and Jimmy Walsh had the better of Attell in six rounds, what would he do to Frankie Neil if the California comes down to the bantam limit of 116 pounds.

* * *

Jimmy Walsh wants to meet Neil and settle the bantam championship once for all and will let Neil name the weighing hour and agree to cut the money any way he see fits.

FRED SIDNEY GOES ABROAD

Fred Sidney, the whirlwind colored featherweight of the Hub, who stands at the head of the class, will take a trip to England early next month and meet the best boys abroad. Before he goes he would like to meet a few of the local ones in his class and will take on any one around 120 pounds.

"LANKY BOB" AFTER HART

PEORIA, Ill., April 15.—Bob Fitzsimmons declared his willingness here to fight Martin Hart at any time and for any purse. He said he had $5,000 to bind the bargain.

L. A. W. ASSEMBLY MAY 30

The League of American Wheelmen will hold the national assembly on May 30.

WORK HORSES WILL HAVE BIG PARADE

The officers of the Boston Work Horse Parade Association report that entries are coming in freely, and that the third annual parade which occurs on May 30, Memorial Day, bids fair to exceed its predecessors. This year, in addition to the large number of prizes offered by the association, a "highly commended" ribbon will be awarded as a fifth prize. The prizes are awarded in sets of first, second, third and fourth, and so many prizes are given that one-half of the exhibitors receive them. Even this proportion will be increased this year by the addition of the "highly commended" ribbon.

Another fact, not perhaps generally understood, is this: The entries being distributed into classes, according to occupation, the exhibitors compete only against persons engaged in the same line of business; and the number of sets of prizes offered in each class is proportioned to the number of entries in that class.

Of special interest will be the class for old horses. The prizes in this class are generous, being as follows: First prize, gold or silver medal of the value of $20, offered by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; second prize, silver medal, value $10, offered by the Animal Rescue League; third prize, $5, offered by the association; fourth prize, $4, offered by the association.

Everybody in Boston who derives pleasure or profit from the use of horses ought to help along the work horse parade. Circulars and entry blanks may be obtained at the office of the secretary, 14 Beacon street.

WHAT IS THE FUNNIEST THING YOUR BABY EVER SAID?

Rare Bits of Philosophy Out of Little Tousled Heads; Choice Gems of Humor Out of the Mouths of Babes

DOES your baby surprise you every day with some quaint conceit? Does he make you laugh by some cute saying? These are what the BOSTON AMERICAN wants.

No more popular chord was ever struck than by this Bright Sayings contest. Out of the hundreds of letters received by every mail from all parts of Greater Boston, it is impossible, of course, to print all.

But do not be discouraged if your contribution has not yet appeared in type. It may be printed to-morrow or some other day. Each must await its turn.

If there were no daily prize of a half-dozen splendid large photographs of your child, the mere pleasure of recording your baby's cleverest saying would be sufficient reward. Wouldn't it?

Make your letters short. Write on one side of the paper. Address your letters to the Bright Sayings Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 89-93 Summer street, Boston.

The "sayings" will be judged by a committee of award, composed of three men and three women of conspicuous prominence in Boston. You may be sure their decision will be just and impartial.

Following is the Committee of Award:

HON. WILLIAM M. OLIN, Secretary of State.

HEZEKIAH BUTTERWORTH, author.

JOHN B. FITZPATRICK, former president of the Clover Club.

KATE GANNETT WELLS of the State Board of Education.

MISS KATHERINE CONWAY, editor of the Pilot.

MRS. JULIA E. DUFF, member of the Boston School Committee.

INDEED IT WAS.

Mamma, having mislaid her pocketbook, after searching high and low without finding it, stood distracted, wondering where in the world it could be. Just then, Roy, aged four, who hitherto had been sitting in a corner sucking a stick of candy, observed with a sigh:

"It's enough to make a perfec' lady mad."

"A year before he had heard a song in the theatre with that title.

A "DOWNRIGHT" PIANO

My little girl saw a square piano for the first time, when about three years old. She ran into the house one day and said: "Mamma, what kind of a piano is mine?" Wondering what prompted the question, I answered.

"An upright."

"Well, she said, 'the people next door have just bought a brand new downright.'"

MRS. W. B. YOUNGS,
No. 7 Brookline street, Cambridge.

NO DOUBT ABOUT IT

One day a young man was sent by the plumber to repair some water pipes that were leaking in the kitchen. While he was busily working on the pipes, my little boy Robert, then three years old, engaged him in conversation.

"What is your name?" asked Robert.

"Well, my little man, my name is Jones," was the reply.

"Oh, no," said Robert, "you are not Jones, you are 'Tom the pipe's sey'."

MRS. F. B. BRADISH,

A SCRIPTURE PARALLEL

My little son Herbert has a small dog called Tiny. One day the puppy jumped into his basket and brought out, in his mouth, his bed. He called to me and said:

"Look mamma, Tiny is like the sick man in the Bible who took up his bed and walked."

MRS. GRACE I. LORING,

RARE OR WELL DONE

One of the funniest things baby ever said was uttered while we were spending our vacation at Nantasket. It was during our time, and after my husband and I had pressed the bill of fare our little chap, James, desired that he also should have the privilege of ordering his own repast. To please him I read aloud each course, reading slowly, in hope he would decide on something, as all this time the waitress was standing by to take our order. I read everything on the menu, when he brought forth an exclamation from the young epicure. Finally, in despair, I exclaimed and so forth, et cetera. Suddenly he shouted:

"Mamma, mamma, there, I'll have some cetra."

MRS. J. L. KINGSTON.

HERE'S HONESTY FOR YOU

I taught my little brother, Ralph Carleton, age four years, a little piece, entitled "Charlie's Quarter," in which there is about a little boy and what he thinks of his mother's baby. The boy asked to speak it he stood up and said:

"It's only brudder, you know, itts ony a pinth; munzer ain't dot no baby. I'e her baby."

IN HOW MANY FATHOMS?

The past two seasons have been spent at the seashore. Having a boat, we often went fishing, accompanied by my small son Ralph, aged four, who was greatly interested in anchoring the boat.

One afternoon, while walking through a field, he saw a cow tied to a stake, and said:

"Look, mamma, Mr. Johnson's got his cow anchored."

MRS. W. J. CROSBY,

DRESSES FROZEN

When Albert was two and a half years old he saw me ironing his starched dresses. He felt them and said: "Oh, my dresses are frozen?"

One Sunday, when he was four years old, he wanted to go out and play. I told him that he mustn't run and play on Sunday, as that was God's day. He looked at me a minute and said:

"If Sunday is God's day, when is Jesus' day?"

MOON BROKEN

One night I was sitting at the window with my little boy Henry, two years and one-half old, he happened to look out and saw the full moon. He inquired what it was, and I told him. A few nights later he looked out and saw the half moon, and cried out most excitedly:

"Oh, mamma, the moon is broke it."

BABY LOUISE BLY, TWO YEARS OLD.

Edible Flowers.

Little Louise; two years old, was keenly interested in a dish of spinach on the table at dinner the other day. It never occurred to her they were edible. She studied the greens in silence for some time and then the mystery was solved in her baby mind. She clapped her hands and said, "Oh! Papa pick flowers for Wessa."

Good Health Depends Largely on Your Teeth

Again We Say Earnestly: Take Care of Your Teeth and They Will Take Care of You

Copyright, 1905, Star Publishing Company.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN hopes that its readers have read with care the articles that we have published upon the care of the teeth.

One of the ablest and most scientific dentists in the country was engaged by this newspaper to write that series of articles. It would have cost any individual reader many hundreds of dollars to have secured for himself and his family the advice that has been published in a series of article, on this page during several weeks past.

We now sum up the chief points that we wish to impress upon readers—especially the fathers and mothers responsible for the care and future health of children.

EVERY child should be trained to use a toothbrush twice a day—in the morning upon rising and at night before going to bed.

The toothbrush should not be too hard, as that injures the gums, causing them to recede from the teeth. A small brush, such as that ordinarily sold for children, is the best to use.

On every wash stand, in every bathroom, there should be every day in the year a good, reliable tooth powder, free from grit. There should be also some good tooth wash with which the mouth may be rinsed and bacteria destroyed.

Remember that the brushing of the teeth must be done thoroughly, not perfunctorily. Brush up and down, that all the crevices may be properly cleaned, and while you are doing this keep your mind upon it. Get the habit of doing your tooth brushing in a certain way, and it will soon become absolutely mechanical and easy.

In using a tooth wash, diluting it with water and rinsing the mouth thoroughly, remember one important fact—

MICROBES, BACTERIA, ETC., CANNOT BE KILLED IN A SECOND. If you simply take the tooth wash into your mouth and eject it immediately it will have little or no effect.

The dentist whose articles we have printed makes it a habit to fill his mouth with the tooth wash and then shave himself, ejecting the tooth wash subsequently, making sure that it remains in his mouth for a considerable length of time.

Men might perhaps follow this example; possibly women might utilize in the same way the time which they devote to curling their hair or fastening it up in the back. Don't think this is a humorous suggestion, but try it. A human being's health and comfort depend upon habits of cleanliness formed and carried out with invariable regularity.

IN addition to the properly chosen toothbrush, tooth powder and disinfecting tooth wash, every person should use at night before going to bed what is known as "DENTAL FLOSS," a sort of thread. This is manufactured by many concerns, and a few cents' worth will last a very long time.

The use of dental floss is, next to good tooth powder and the right kind of a toothbrush, the greatest possible insurance against decaying teeth.

Only the dental floss can effectually remove the harmful matter from between the teeth and prevent largely the decay that begins nearly always where one tooth touches the other.

In selecting dental floss ask for that which is waxed. Be careful in its use, cause it to enter the spaces between your teeth VERY GENTLY. Do not push it up violently, as that tends to push back the gums.

An enormous improvement in the teeth would ensue immediately if everybody would substitute this dental floss for the harmful and hideous toothpicks, so much in evidence.

Toothpicks hurt the teeth. They frequently cause cavities in the soft, bony structure above the enamel covering. They cause infinite harm to the gums—and they are an atrocious eyesore besides. Abolish them and adopt the dental floss instead.

ALL this may be found very long and proxy to the reader in a hurry. But the advice on the subject of the teeth which this newspaper has given will save readers from the atrocious suffering of toothache, provided they combine with personal care an occasional visit to a thoroughly reliable dentist.

Digestion really depends upon the work that is done with the teeth. And the preservation of the teeth depends upon their constant and energetic use.

Don't get in the habit of chewing on one side of your mouth only. Chew as long as you can every mouthful. Remember that the work which is NOT done by your teeth must be done by your stomach, AND YOUR STOMACH HASN'T ANY TEETH.

Had teeth and had eating, without enough chewing, are the very foundations of dyspepsia. AND ONE-HALF OF ALL DISEASES. Remember that.

Use your teeth, take care of your teeth; above all, teach your children to do so, AND THE TEETH WILL TAKE CARE OF YOU.

Ask any old man or middle-aged man whose teeth are gone how much suffering that has meant to him, and be warned by him.

CHAPTER XXXIX.
Mrs. Lang's Visitor.

MONSIEUR REVELLE had done well, and his bank balance was altogether most satisfactory. In short, Revelle's Circus was booming.

In the ordinary course of events the circus would have gone into winter quarters at the end of October. This year quite a new order of things obtained. Revelle was a pushing man, and he saw possibilities in his other methods. He was an original man, too, and when he discovered an opportunity for a move or less permanent show at Mapella, he did not hesitate.

Revelle obtained a two months' lease of the drill-hall in Mapella for his show, and at once set about extensively advertising.

"REVELLE'S GRAND HIPPODROME," with special Christmas programme.

"There's going to be a fortune in it, George," said Revelle, when he first mooted the subject to the Lion King, who was one of the principal owners of the unit George Lang had shaken his head.

"Don't you believe it, Governor," he had said. "Circuses are a thing of the past, and will never pay anymore. You may take my word for it."

But Revelle had been sanguine and inspired George with some confidence.

"Anyhow," he said, "you'll stay on."

"I don't mind if I do," he had laughed George Lang. "I haven't got any choice, anyhow, I'll tell you what I'll do, George," said Revelle; "I'll make it a bargain between you and me. I'll pay you five dollars a week extra. How'll that suit you."

"Suits me down to the ground," declared George, really delighted at Revelle's unexpected outburst of generosity.

It was now Christmas week and Mapella and the neighborhood had been profusely billed. The drill hall had been cleverly seated. Everything, in fact, was in perfect order for the opening performance, fixed to take place on Tuesday night—the Thursday before Christmas.

Mrs. Lang was dispending tea and hot buttered toast to George and Little Dorrit in her lodgings in Church street in Mapella for the "first night" had been abandoned for the Winter, and George, with all the other principals, had found rooms in the city, close to the drill hall, where, nevertheless, he nearly daily fixed. It was there that the horses and animals were stabled, in charge of their attendant grooms; there, too, of course, were his lions. They required constant attention.

The lodgings in Church street, No. 76, were very comfortable, though the rent was not one to let anything stand in her way where George's comfort was concerned. They stayed the front first floor sitting room with Mrs. Pippett, the landlading agent of Revelle, a wonderfully cheerful specimen of humanity, who refused to be depressed, though Fate had never ceased dealing him dire and fearful blows all his life.

George Lang, of course, had a bedroom to himself, and Little Dorrit shared Mrs. Lang's.

"I'm going to be a great show to-night, George," said Mrs. Lang, as she poured out for her adored one a second cup of breakfast-cup of tea.

"It'll be a failure," said George, mood-ily, "if Kanre's cough isn't better."

"What about me?" laughed the little golden-haired, saucy girl with the slight, flexible figure. "I'm doing my best, Hannah Arrod gins."

The name made George laughed boisterously.

"Why, of course, my Little Dorrit; I was forgetting you!" And then he frowned. "It's an infernal shame to let you do it," he said, in a deep, angry voice—"an infernal shame."

"But I'm not afraid," piped the child tremulously.

"Afraid? Of course, you aren't afraid! You're the plucked little girl in the world; but all the same, it's a shame."

"And then there's Bella," the child. "Bella's got a new mare. You should just see her! She's a beauty, and I'm going is able to spoil the show, because you're greatly interested in Bella."

Both Lang's frown died, and a soft, faraway light came into his blue eyes.

"Bella!" he murmured, oblivious of the presence of any one else—"Bella's coming in to supper to-night after the show's over," he repeated Mrs. Lang quickly. "I've just been here. She's going to ride Bella herself to-night, not the new mare. The new mare's a dear."

George frowned, and looked intently at the little girl who sat opposite him, buttered toast on the other side of the table.

"You aren't looking up to the mark, Little Dorrit," he said meditatively. "What's wrong with you?"

"I'm all right, George," answered the child sweetly. "I'm very well."

In the circus Little Dorrit, as she was called, was something of an enigma. No one quite knew who she was, or where she originally came from.

Once Mr. Lang, a commercial agent and a big draw; but he made no effort to look upon the child as anything else, so he approached Mrs. Lang upon the subject.

"Look after the brat," he said, "make and feed her, and keep her always up to the mark, and I'll let you have four dollars a week."

Mrs. Lang agreed, and the bargain was struck. It had been religiously adhered to for the last two years, and during that time Little Dorrit had advanced by leaps and bounds in her perilous profession, until she was the more or less petted idol of the great Revelle himself.

There had always been an atmosphere of mystery about the child, and no one—not even Revelle himself—had ever been able to get at the truth.

She had a sweet disposition, and, for her age, she was barely ten—a most extraordinarily advanced intelligence.

"I tell you what we must do for you, Liddie," said George Lang as he sat down at the table at the conclusion of a very substantial meal; "we must have a Christmas tree party on Christmas Day. Eh, what do you say to that?"

"It would be splendid!" exclaimed the child, delightedly.

"And a Christmas tree—eh, Dorrit?" George Lang chuckled noisily. The child's blue eyes glistened. "We'll have a real Christmas tree, with toys and candles. What do you say to that?"

He looked inquiringly at his mother, but Mrs. Lang's brow was compressed and she shook her head sadly but firmly. She was thinking of the expense. George was also no thoughtless in his generosity.

What was going to happen if the Christmas idea proved a failure, Mrs. Lang shuddered to contemplate.

There were things which never troubled George. His was a happy-go-lucky, confidential disposition, and he had a constitutional inability to look upon anything but the bright side of things.

He saw his mother's frown of disapproval and laughed cheerily.

"I know what you're thinking of, mother," he said, "but don't you bother about that. Things'll turn out all right, and when the show starts there'll be an extra $5 a week. What about that? That'll just make all the difference in the world, the difference between hand and grinding poverty"—he adopted a mock melodramatic air—"and bloated affluence. Heigho! Well, I must be off to have another look at Fanny, poor old girl!"

Mrs. Lang shook her head despondingly and fell to wondering whether they would be able to pay the rent next week. It was no use talking to George about such mundane details as these. George lived in the clouds.

Little Dorrit helped Mrs. Lang to clear away the things and wash up generally, and then, as the clock struck the half-hour, she put on her little hat and coat and went out to the drill hall for her final rehearsal.

Left alone, Mrs. Lang sank into a rocking chair by the fire, and gave herself up to a few moments to her thoughts.

She sat alone before the fire for a long time, perhaps half an hour, or even more, before she realized that she had many things to do, and that she ought to be over at the drill hall attending to the various costumes which were to dazzle the populace of Mapella to-morrow night.

She put on her jacket and bustled out put a few coals on the fire, put them went out of the room on to the landing.

Coming up the stairs was Mrs. Ricketts, the landlady. She was being closely followed by a tall man.

"Yes, sir," Mrs. Ricketts was saying, "you'll find the house very comfortable, and, as you say, it's most convenient for you, without so several of Mr. Revelle's people staying here already. There's Mr. Lang and——"

"That's all right, madam," said the man; "don't you bother. I'm sure I shall be all right. It's only a question of terms——"

Mrs. Lang heard the voice, and it seemed to her as if the very universe suddenly came to a standstill. Everything upon round her; her heart seemed to stop beating.

"Merciful heaven!" she gasped, as she staggered forward and clutched the banister at the top of the stairs. "It cannot be—it cannot be!"

The tall man looked up and saw her, and he stopped short and gave vent to a little gasp of surprise.

The recognition was mutual.

"Joan," he murmured, "by all that's wonderful!"

"Karl!" breathed the woman—"Karl! You here! Alive, Karl! Oh, my God!"

CHAPTER XL.
From the Dead.

MRS. LANG did not faint, nor did Karl Karoff lose his head. Mrs. Ricketts, the landlady, being rather deaf and very portly, had her back turned and was far too much occupied in expatiating breathlessly upon the advantages of residence in her lodging house to observe that the recognition between Mr. Jones and Mrs. Lang was anything more than that which might naturally take place between two persons both employed by the great Monsieur Felix Revelle in his grand circus and menagerie, which was about to take the city of Mapella by storm.

Keeping herself under really marvellous control, Mrs. Lang stood close to allow Mrs. Ricketts and her new lodger to pass her; but Karl Karoff, known to his prospective landlady as Mr. Jones, was less fortunate in his efforts at hiding his real feelings.

"What are you doing here?" he whispered in tone of unconcealed agitation. "I—I must see you—see you at once."

"That is my room," said Mrs. Lang, in dleating the door of the sitting room she had just vacated.

"But you? I don't understand. Why are you living here?"

"My name is Lang," she answered quietly. "I am George Lang's mother."

"George Lang, the Lion King?"

"Yes."

"By Jove!" The man cast a quick, apprehensive glance at his prospective landlady. Mrs. Lang understood.

"This way, Mr. Jones!" said Mrs. Ricketts, mounting the next flight of stairs. "Ah, I see you know each other! Good evening, Mrs. Lang! Still enjoying the seasonable weather, is it not? Yes, this way, Mr. Jones."

"That's my name," said the man, beneath his breath. "Don't forget. Tell where can I see you? Quick!"

Mrs. Lang again indicated the door of her sitting room.

"Come in and see me when you have finished with Mrs. Ricketts," she said.

"All right," said the man, hurrying after Mrs. Ricketts. "I shan't be more than a minute. Don't fail me."

So saying he ran lightly up the stairs after Mrs. Ricketts, and Mrs. Lang heard him say: "I didn't know the Langs were staying in your house."

"Well, I told you so, anyhow," retorted Mrs. Ricketts. "Nice people, the Langs; quite an important person Mr. George, with his lions."

"Oh, quite!" assented Mr. Jones. "A wonderful man, too. I must look up Mrs. Lang when I see my room."

Meantime, Mrs. Lang re-entered the sitting room, collapsed into the recently vacated rocking chair, and occupied herself for several minutes in struggling valiantly against an almost unconquerable inclination to faint.

Only one thought possessed her, to the exclusion of all others. Karl Karoff was under the same roof as she. Karl Karoff was alive; Karl Karaf had seen and recognized her after all these years. And Karl Karoff would be with her, here in this room, in a few minutes.

It would be half an hour at least before either George or Little Dorrit came in.

She must feverishly work out all the possibilities and probabilities in her mind when there was a tap at the door, and Karl Karoff entered silently and stealthily, closed the door, and looked around him with suspicion.

"Are you alone?" he whispered.

"Yes."

"And likely to be for a bit?"

"Half an hour, at any rate. I cannot answer for longer."

TO BE CONTINUED.

Martyrs to Carelessness.

A bit of advice to the readers of the Boston American. Not a long and uninteresting discourse on dyspepsia cures. Not a display of technical terms or medical hieroglyphics, but simply a delightful plan, to be applied to one's every day life.

AMONG THE FOLLIES OF THE AGE.

Statistics point to hundreds of thousands of people, who, through carelessless, are undermining their health in a way least suspected. THE GUARDS TO THE GATWAY OF HEALTH ARE THE TEETH, and we positively assert that no constitution is so strong that it will not finally succumb to improper mastication of food, and how can you properly masticate food with loose, sore, sensitive teeth? Bear in mind this simple advice: If you have been neglecting your teeth—stop it! Start out again on the right tack. Set an example to your children, and teach them that to have good health they must have good teeth, and to have good teeth they must heed this warning.

DISCARD FOREVER UNKNOWN AND UNTRIED DENTIFRICES.

They are tremendous factors in the destruction of the teeth. If you are using them now cast them out, and never again be persuaded to waste your time and money upon them. If you are not using a dentifrice, start now. This is the day. Not to-morrow.

How to Select a Dentifrice.

1st. It must be positively non-acid.
2nd. It must be only slightly alkaline. (Soaps are too much so.)
3rd. It must not contain any bleaching preparation.
4th. It must not be gritty or contain any substances injurious to the teeth, gums or mouth.

There is just one dentifrice in the world that can stand the test. It has been in universal use in every country for over sixty years, and is readily conceded THE GREAT AMERICAN DENTIFRICE,

FROM REAL ESTATE OFFICE TO STAGE, THIS GIRL JUMPS

BOSTON GIRL IN "THE FILIBUSTER" CHORUS

Makes a Hit in the Chorus of "The Filibuster" and Will Go on Road With Company.

From business to the stage is the jump Miss Albertine Marr, a pretty nineteen-year-old Roxbury girl, has made. She has been successful in the real estate business. Her initial work on the stage indicates she will be successful there.

In the office of former President of the Common Council Timothy L. Connolly at No. 224 Dudley street, Miss Marr has been in charge of the real estate department since she left the Roxbury High School.

Living with her mother, Mrs. Mary Marr, at No. 22 Mount Pleasant avenue, she had found time outside her office duties to have her voice—an exceptionally good alto—cultivated.

She watched for her opportunity to demonstrate to a theatrical manager that she has in her the stuff of which comic opera stars are made. It came when "The Filibuster" opened at the Majestic a few weeks ago. She was given a place in the chorus, where she has never once betrayed in her work that she was not in the professional class.

Soon the company is going on the road. Miss Marr, accompanied by her mother, is going with it.

REED GETS SIX YEARS

Charles M. Reed, the aged embezzler of trust funds, has been sentenced to a term of not more than eight years nor less than six years in the State Prison.

Not a relative or friend or a former business associate was in the court when sentence was pronounced to speak either for him or to him. Mr. Reed broke up well during the trying ordeal, but disappointment was plainly visible on his face when he looked about the court room and did not see anybody he knew.

Under the statute providing sentence for simple larceny or embezzlement, Reed could not have been sentenced to more than five years, considering there was only one count in the indictment on which sentence was to be imposed, that relating to the stealings from the Samuel W. Cushing estate.

The statute selected was one recently enacted governing embezzlements by trustees or guardians. Under this the maximum is ten years.

HAS TROUBLES, TRIES SUICIDE

Trouble with his sweetheart, trouble with his employers and trouble at home are given as the cause for an attempt at suicide by Clarence E. Dussault, of No. 3 Gilman terrace, Somerville. He went to a Fleet street hotel and shot himself twice with a revolver.

A waiter in the hotel heard the shots, and rushing into the room, seized the wounded man before he could fire a third time. Dussault begged to be allowed to kill himself. He was taken to the Relief Hospital, where it was found that the first shot had glanced of his skull, fracturing it. The second struck a rib and was deflected from the heart. His condition is serious.

Dussault had his position at No. 28 Blackstone street a short time ago and has been unable to get work since that time. He is twenty-five years old.

WIFE, 20, LEFT RECLUSE OF 70

Wealthy Natick Man Asks Divorce Because Girl Bride Ran Away in 8 Days.

FIRST WIFE DEAD 3 MONTHS

Daniel Howard, a wealthy seventy-year-old recluse, whose home is on Pegan Hill, South Natick, in the Middlesex County Superior Court, in East Cambridge, asked for a divorce from his twenty-year-old wife, who ran away from him, he says, eight days after the ceremony that made them man and wife. The case was heard by Judge Lawton, and he reserved his decision.

There was no contest to the petition. Howard told the court that three months after his first wife died he married Miss Alice M. Howes of Boston. The wedding was performed on April 1, 1900, and on the ninth he saw her for the last time. He said that he did not know why she left him.

Howard has the repute of being wealthy in his vicinity. He rarely leaves his house, and many people, who are his neighbors, have never seen him. Early in 1900 his wife died. An accomplished daughter, who received a musical education in Europe, died shortly before and the double grief affected the old man deeply.

The Miss Howes from whom he is now trying to get a divorce had been a nurse at his home during Mrs. Howard's fatal illness. His farm is conducted by a hired man and a housekeeper has for a number of years attended to the house.

TELLS HOW GIFT CAME

Sec. Barton Issues Official Circular to Members of American Board of Missions.

NO RESTRAINT ON SPEECH

Secretary James L. Barton, D. D., is sending to day to members of the American Board of Foreign Missions the official statement of how John D. Rockefeller came to make his gift of $100,000 to the board. The first intimation that the oil king was interested in the work of the mission was in a letter received in April, 1902, asking for a conference in regard to missionary work in general.

Last December Secretary Barton wrote regarding the eighteen higher educational institutions of the board, and asked if it would not be possible to secure funds for their endowment. Through his secretary, Mr. Gates, Mr. Rockefeller promised to give $100,000. The letter announcing the gift was received February 13, 1905, and was accepted by the Prudential Committee the following day.

Secretary Barton makes the following editorial:

"In soliciting and accepting this gift neither the Prudential Committee, the officers and members of the American Board, nor the pastors and members of our Congregational churches assume any obligation to advocate the cause of or defend any individual or corporation, nor be governed by the gift in the restraint from absolute freedom of speech accorded to the dictates of its untrammeled conscience."

REVERE'S HOME TO BE SAVED

Memorial Association Formed to Raise Money for Its Purchase and Preservation.

$30,000 AMOUNT NEEDED

The old home of Paul Revere, on North square, is to be preserved. The Paul Revere Memorial Association, which has just been organized, will purchase the old building and a competent architect will cause the life of the house. It will take $30,000 to take care of the financial end of the project, $12,000 of which will be used to purchase the property.

Lieutenant-Governor Curtis Guild is the president of the new organization. Major Henry L. Higginson is treasurer and W. Sumner Appleton secretary. The executive committee is made up of Walter K. Page, John P. Reynolds, Jr., W. Prescott Wolcott and Colonel William D. Sohier.

A committee consisting of Governor Douglas, Lieut. Governor Curtis Guild, Mayor P. A. Collins, William H. Revere and a member from each of the various societies of the Revolutionary War, the Massachusetts Historical Society, New England Genealogical Society, Bostonian Society, St. Andrew Lodge of Masons, of which Paul Revere was master, and the Paul Revere School is to assist in raising funds for the movement.

At the meeting of the organization in the Twentieth Century Clubhouse, City Register McGlenen read from the records of certain transfers of the old homestead, from which it developed that the building is the oldest in Boston, having been erected between the years 1677 and 1681.

For many years the abode of a mixed and nondescriptive transient, the famous old building has begun to show the effects of neglect, and to succumb to the assaults of the elements without and rough usage within.

MRS. EDWARDS ADMITS CRIME

Tries to Free Greason, Whom She Previously Implicated in Husband's Murder.

NOW ACCUSES DAUGHTER

Special to the Boston American.

READING, Pa., April 15.—In her efforts to save the negro, Samuel Greason, from the gallows, Mrs. Kate Edwards takes the blame for the murder of her husband upon her daughter Mary and herself.

Mrs. Edwards, who entered the crowded court room in fine and trembling, was entirely self-possessed during the trial of the tragedy. She was on the witness stand nearly all day, telling how she and her daughter Mary planned the murder, how she killed her husband and that all of her previous evidence against Greason was untrue. Mrs. Edwards still laughs answered every question put to her. She did not break down, nor did she shed any tears.

In her recital of the scenes attending the crime, she said:

"I hit him a few times. He was only stunned, and partly raised himself, when I finished him with a few more strong blows."

It was said by her on cross-examination that her daughter Mary first suggested the murder, and while she and her daughter planned the crime led the court to remark that the daughter could be convicted, Mrs. Edwards is now in St. Louis. Judge Bechtel court will render a decision next week.

HOLSTON HURT IN GHOST HUNT

Pawtucket Man Says He Was Beaten While Watching for Spirits in Cemetery.

SAID HE SLEW MABEL PAGE

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 15.—Andrew Holston was brought into the police station here with a queer tale to account for his bruised face and sprained ankles. Holston is the man who created a sensation a short time ago by asserting that he killed Mabel Page.

For the purpose of disproving the existence of ghosts, he said he paid a visit to the Mineral Spring Cemetery after mid night. He said he was pounced upon by two men, who threw him to the ground and pounded him unmercifully, after which they fled.

ANNUAL CHORAL UNION CONCERT

The eighth annual concert of the People's Choral Union tomorrow evening in Symphony Hall promises to be the most interesting and important event in the history of the organization. Special attention is attracted to it from the fact that Dr. Frost's version of Handel's "Messiah" will be sung for the first time in Boston.

The soloists will be Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, soprano; Miss Katherine Ricker, alto; Clarence B. Shirley, tenor; Charles Dedmont, bass. Herman A. Scheid will be organist and Miss Ethel G. Scott pianist.

The box office at Symphony Hall will be open at 1 p. m. tomorrow for the sale of seats.

RISKED HIS LIFE TO STOP RUNAWAY

Patrolman Burke of the Court square station, made a very risky stop of a run away cab in Scollay square early to-day. The cab was driven by James O'Keefe, who had just started from Bosworth street to put up for the night, and as he turned into Tremont street the horse became frightened at some flying paper and came down the street at record-breaking speed for a cab horse. Patrolman Burke, seeing him coming, at great risk sprang into the square, and, catching hold of the bridle, stopped the runaway after being dragged quite a distance.

The "Equitable" Spider Fight

When Trust Thieves Quarrel, Fools Learn How They Are Robbed

We have often compared the trusts to spiders. Spiders eat each other up when they cannot find flies. Put ten spiders in a glass jar, and in a few hours you will find one spider very fat and nine sucked dry.

We have often expressed the hope that the trust spiders might soon begin to fight and eat each other, making it easy in the end for the people to crush the one remaining big, fat, lethargic spider.

This Equitable fight seems to be pretty much along spider lines.

Mr. Hyde, who created the Equitable Life Assurance Society and owned the majority of the stock, left it to his son, James H. Hyde.

He left that son in care of his best friend, Mr. Alexander, president of the Equitable. Mr. Alexander was asked, and, of course, he promised, to protect the interests of his friend's son. He was to turn over the control of the company to the son at the age of thirty.

Mr. Alexander's conscience told him—a month or two before the time came to give the son his property—that he ought to kick that son out of the company created by his father.

That is what appears on the surface—apparently it is only an attempt on the part of Mr. Alexander, friend of the dead Equitable president, to take the control of the company away from his friend's son.

But there are other things in it.

For instance, Harriman, one great railroad man, is fighting Morgan, another great railroad man. And we find Morgan's newspaper excited and energetic in the Equitable row.

It is found that those very eminent Trust spiders—Morgan, Harriman, Hill, Gould and others—are trying to get each other's life blood. Young Mr. Hyde, a newcomer in the spider battle, runs the risk of losing his young life in the scuffle.

A good many outside small spiders, known to the naturalist as "butters-in"—Crimmins, Morgenthau, Choate and others—are hurrying to the slaughter to see what they can pick up.

Everybody is protesting powerful, deep love and affection for the policy-holders—and it is comically evident that everybody concerned is simply trying to get a chance to get the policy-holders' money FOR HIMSELF.

In Morgan's office there is an able young citizen named Perkins, who represents the New York Life Insurance Company. That big life insurance company could swallow the Equitable and enjoy it, just as the Equitable would enjoy swallowing the New York Life.

It is a very nice spider fight, and, in the long run, the policy-holders may benefit, if the different life insurance companies and financial big bugs tell enough truth about each other to force the foolish public into government life insurance, such as they have in New Zealand.

Already the public has learned a great deal. The man who pays the premium on his little policy each year is told that almost anybody that has a pull can get a hundred thousand dollars a year out of his pocket and the pockets of his fellow policy-holders. Mr. Alexander swears that the company of which he is president has been robbed—but he does NOT explain why he, as president, let it be robbed until he got ready to take control from his friend's son.

People throughout the country find that the insurance companies are used as chips in the Wall Street gambling game.

They find that Mr. Alexander is agitated because a man who owned more than half of the company charged up a six-thousand-dollar public dinner to the cost of advertising—and that the same Mr. Alexander paid a hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars to one of his henchmen, Mr. Tarbell, in an interestingly curious manner.

If the poor, foolish public had tried to get at the facts in the life insurance business on its own account it might have spent years in the law courts and in the legislatures without learning one-tenth as much as it learned in ten days after the spiders in that particular trust began fighting among themselves.

Building Navies for the Scrap Pile

The sale by England of thirty-one modern warships for less than 5 per cent. of what they cost to build will furnish a text for the people who do not believe in the effort to keep a navy up to date and competent to do the work that may be demanded of it in extremity. Fifteen million dollars' worth of warships that have never even had a chance to fight is certainly a vast amount to put down on the wrong side of the naval ledger, but there is another side of the case.

The Admiralty's contention is that the presence of a navy able to cope with any two navies in the world is cheap insurance, considering what losing a war would mean to England.

Russia was one of the Powers that proceeded on the basis of a modest naval program. A suggestion that she spend a hundred million dollars on warships two years ago would have seemed like national insanity, yet her failure to do that very thing makes it possible to-day for Japan to contemplate charging her $800,000,000 as the price of peace, with Port Arthur and the Mikado only knows what else thrown in.

The game of world politics cannot be played on a small stake.

Fortunate are we that we are outside the international grab game, and that we can go ahead with a feeling of perfect security, increasing our navy without reference to a possible union of Powers that would deem our possession of fewer ships than their combined armaments their oportunity to attack us.

There are many advantages, to nations as well as to individuals, in minding one's own business.

AREN'T MEN THE WRETCHES?

1. MRS. SNOOKS—John, I have a new idea. On your way to the office each morning I am going to have you stop at the market and do the marketing. Seeing what you buy is far better than ordering over the 'phone. Take the basket dear; the market men will send it home.

2. MR. SNOOKS—However! Did mortal ever hear of such an idea? ME going to market. Well, I had to make a bluff at it, anyway. But you can bet your life it will be the last time she asks me to do the marketing.

3. MRS. SNOOKS—Yes, here's a list of what Mrs. Snooks wants. No; I don't care to look at the articles; put in any old thing. Just add two quarts of those dollar-a-quart strawberries, three bunches of that hot house asparagus, a dozen cucumbers, five pounds of those imported grapes, and any other of those high-priced novelties on the vegetable line you have in stock. Send the bill up with the goods.

4. MR. SNOOKS—Whew! Did you ever see such a bill? Why, it's simply outrageous. Just look at this bill for the stuff you purchased this morning. Thirty-nine dollars and ten cents. The thieves looked so tempting you couldn't help buying them, eh? Well, you can wager I'll never put you in the way of such temptation again. The very idea of such extravagance. You shall never do any more marketing if I can help it. There, now!

5. *MRS. SNOOKS (that evening)—John Snooks, you are insane. Just look at this bill for the stuff you purchased this morning. Thirty-nine dollars and ten cents. The thieves looked so tempting you couldn't help buying them, eh? Well, you can wager I'll never put you in the way of such temptation again. The very idea of such extravagance. Do Women Really Enjoy Making Sacrifices for Their Families, as so Many of Them Say They Do?

"DO women really enjoy sacrificing themselves?" asked the Bookkeeper.

"Do you mean an actual sacrifice or a stage sacrifice?" carelessly inquired the Stenographer.

"Real sacrifices—the ones with wrops in 'em, where a person gives up doing the thing she wants to, and does the thing she loathes."

"Not on your life, women don't enjoy it," returned the Stenographer emphatically. "And what is more, there are mighty few real sacrifices in theirs."

"Huh," exclaimed the Bookkeeper, "if that is true, what is it makes them put up their fancy line of conversation about the sacred joy a woman experiences in sacrificing herself for her family? I thought a woman's idea of a picnic was to go out and make a martyr of herself."

"That's the way they talk," responded the Stenographer. "I've heard it a million times. Only yesterday a woman held me up for an hour while she orated about the previous privilege it was for a mother to sacrifice herself for her children and the noble pleasure she got out of doing it."

"What did you think of it?" interrogated the Bookkeeper.

"I thought that she was talking through her Easter bonnet," answered the Stenographer. "I always know when a woman talks in a crooked ice voice about the pleasure of self-sacrifice that she is playing to the galleries. It's all acting. She never has been touched.

"It's a great and noble thing to make a sacrifice of yourself, if you have to, but there's no fun in it, and it's an idiotic pose to pretend that there is."

"What makes women affect to enjoy sacrificing themselves?" demanded the Bookkeeper.

"They think it makes them interesting for one thing," returned the Stenographer, "and for another it is such a gorgeous excuse for everything they do that leave undone, but when you hear a woman discoursing about the pleasure of self-sacrifice you can bet your last dollar that she is giving up something that she didn't want to do anyway.

"If you meet a dowdy woman who tells you that she sacrifices the pleasures of dress to help her husband and that she enjoys giving up things for his sake, you can depend on it that she is one of those ladies who are too lazy to put their clothes on properly.

"If you hear a woman say that she never has time to read or practice her music or go in society because she feels it her duty never to let her children out of her sight, but that there is no pleasure equal to the pleasure a mother finds in sacrificing herself for her children, you may just make a note up that she is one of the indolent and antidiluvian women who are glad to have a good excuse for not keeping up with the procession."

"Aren't women sincere in thinking that they are making sacrifices when they aren't?" asked the Bookkeeper.

"Sure," replied the Stenographer. "There is nobody else in the world that we can deceive so easily as we can ourselves."

"But there must be many women who do have to make real sacrifices," said the Bookkeeper.

"There are millions of them. God help them," responded the Stenographer, "but the women who are making real sacrifices—the women who are putting up with drunken brutes of husbands for their children's sakes, who are toiling beyond their strength to support helpless people who are dependent upon them, who love pretty clothes and who have to wear dingy ones, who love the graces of life and are forced to be household drudges—are not prating about the joy that a woman experiences in sacrificing herself.

"They are marring it with clenched teeth, and they are not pretending to themselves or anybody else that there is any fun in it.

"This thing of women saying that they enjoy sacrificing themselves makes me tired."

"There Is Nobody We Can Deceive as Easily as Ourselves."

A Fable in Verse

By James Montague

SAID the long-tailed mountain lion
To the bang-tailed grizzly bear:
"Teddy may exterminate us
If we do not have a care.
He is coming up the mountain,
He is coming on the run;
And he'll put us out of business
WITH HIS GREAT BIG GUN!"

Said the big and bang-tailed grizzly
To the lion: "Don't you think
That to hear these tales of Teddy
And his prowess, is to wink?
He's been chasing corporations,
He has had them on the run
Ever since he's been in office,
BUT HE'S NOT GOT ONE!"

Little Editorials from the People

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your editorial in Wednesday's paper says that the Franco-German war of 1870 was begun by Napoleon III., urged on by his wife, she being urged on by her religious advisers. Is this true history? I believe it to be a general and just opinion that that war was planned, precipitated and forcibly being fully ready for it, was forced on France by the old Emperor, urged on by Bismarck. Certainly Germany had been for twenty months preparing for the war and her commissariat, while France's condition was pitifully unready for a war.

ALBION.

CAN A MAN TELL A WOMAN HOW TO DRESS?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The editorial writer of your paper, who writes some very brilliant and wise things and some that are very foolish, has had some remarks to make about women's mode of dressing.

I am a woman and can appreciate how silly it is for a mere man to attempt to tell what a woman should wear.

If women dressed as men say they should the very man who planned their outfit would be the first to cry out against it. If they persisted in wearing the very clothes he had designed for them would not their frumps and foxiness then be the fashion plate who, foolish as she might be, would still be attractive.

I'll venture to say that if any woman to whom that editorial writer is especially interested should wear a "flat hat, with a broad brim, a small bunch of flowers in front and a ribbon hanging down behind," if she left off corsets, if she wore shoes two sizes too large, if she wore a skirt four inches above those large shoes, he would shut his eyes to the sight and plead with her to forget that he ever spoke and return to the old fashions.

Men may talk dress reform until they are black in the face, but it's not the dress reformist at whose generous feet they lay their hearts and their fortunes.

The "sensible" dressed woman is seldom a reigning belle, often she is an old maid. The best thing that the average man knows about how to dress a woman is to sign the check which pays for the clothes that she selects.
